Another Idea

A drive to divorce questions of tax forgiveness and "doubling up" from pay-as-you-go legislation, and reserve to the individual taxpayer the right to keep up to date or remain a year behind in payment to the collector, gained headway in the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

Some members predicted that a majority of the 25-man committee might vote today to indorse pay-as-you-earn legislation limited to changing the present collection system to include a withholding-at-the-source levy for wage and salary earners to start July 1.

Discount Sought

Since such a plan would not force any taxpayer to get abreast of his payments, members were preparing to seek provision for a special discount that would encourage the individual to bring himself up to date, paying his income levy as the income was received. A 5 or 10 per cent discount was being considered.

At the same time, members questioned whether a pay-as-you-go plan for farmers, landlords, businessmen, self-employed persons and others could be imposed on a mandatory basis, but conceded that it might be workable on a voluntary basis.

Essentials Listed

These developments, plus rejection of the last of the compromise plans to forgive any part of 1942 taxes, appeared to have stripped the possible draft of legislation to these essentials:

1. A 20 per cent withholding levy to be applied to the taxable part of salaries and wages, to start July 1.

2. A definition that the withholding levy would be regarded as collecting, first the unpaid balance of taxes on 1942 income, second any unpaid Victory taxes, and, third, anything extra would to to settle taxes on 1943 income.

3. Voluntary collection arrangements to help farmers and others to get up to date in their payments.

Of the three major "forgiveness" plans rejected, at least one was headed for revival on the House floor. That was the plan of Beardsley Ruml, New York banker, as embodied in a bill by Representative Carlson (Republican) of Kansas, to wipe out a full year of tax liability for all individuals while

Calls for Labor Draft

Stimson Defends Big Army Program, Assails Its Critics

Vigorously defending the program for an Army of 8,200,000 men by the end of 1943, Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, struck out at the War Department's critics in a radio address last night, declaring that while the Army was trying to shorten the war, thereby saving the lives of hundreds of thousands of young Americans, the advocates of a smaller army were merely seeking to preserve the amenities of life.

Stimson also called for immediate passage of the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill, asserting that the failure of American industry, agriculture, and the civilian population to achieve as yet an all-out effort was due to too great reliance on voluntary cooperation. He said that England's experience had shown that this method wouldn't work, owing to the opposition of a small, "recalcitrant or thoughtless" minority.

"It is the duty of every citizen," he continued, "to examine into his own life and his own community and see whether production in industry and on the farm cannot be increased enormously in efficiency; whether absenteeism, threatened strikes, general complacency, insistence on 'business as usual,' or even insistence on hoped-for standards of living, are not going a long way to prevent what could be accomplished by an all-out war effort.

"If you are content with the present situation and with the present results in industry, in agriculture, and in our civilian life, then I suggest that you go to one of our great camps and see our boys in uniform working. I suggest that you read the detailed dispatches from Tunisia and the southwest Pacific about the fighting efforts of our soldiers. I suggest that you compare your comforts of life with theirs, and then ask youself again—are you content?"

Criticism of the proposed size of the Army, said the Secretary, results from the delusion that the war can be won "in some easy manner and without too much trouble and sacrifice."

That size—8,200,000 men by the end of 1943—has been fixed after months of study by the General Staff and the War College, Stimson explained, correlated with studies

Labor Lack Causes Auction Of Dairy Herd in D. C. 'Shed'

By Walter Wood
Post Staff Writer

Mild-mannered Julian P. Kelly, a gaunt 55-year-old Fauquier County farmer, called a halt to the auction, thrust his hands into the pockets of his corduroy pants yesterday afternoon, and stalked toward the house of his Fox Chase Farm for which he couldn't get a higher bid than his own of $15,000.

Kelly had turned his back on the circle of dairy farmers, breeders and dealers standing around Auctioneer L. T. Shuma, 53, of Warrenton. Kelly and his wife, Mary, will live on the 248 acres and he will dry-farm it before he will "give it away," he said.

This farmer, who has been on the [illegible] one of the operators of Fauquier's 1800 active farms who are face to face today with the farm labor shortage, a problem which will reach its critical peak in four weeks—when spring comes to the rolling foothills of Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains.

Kelly before stopping the sale of his land had received good prices for his dairy cattle. Twenty head and a bull went on the block.

The sale of his herd eliminated another dairy farmer from nearby Virginia who supplies milk to the Washington market. The cows were bought by a few other dairy farmers whose good luck it is to be able to operate under existing conditions.

OPA Plans Live Hog Ceiling To Keep Down Price of Pork

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Government has decided to put a ceiling price on live hogs below current market prices and at a level that will make it unnecessary to raise dollars and cents prices on pork.

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown told reporters of the decision yesterday following a closed conference with members of the Senate Banking and Currency and Finance Committees on problems of price and profits control and OPA reorganization.

Brown strongly intimated that ceiling prices on hogs will be followed by ceilings on beef and other livestock. He asserted: "There definitely should be (livestock) ceilings and there will be. They must come."

The price administrator also disclosed that the Office of Price Administration has reviewed a policy originally affirmed by his predecessor, Leon Henderson, of examining, for possible reductions, the prices of manufacturers whose unit production costs have been lowered by increased output since the war began.

When live hog price ceilings are put into effect—and they are scheduled to be announced in a few days—pork will become the first meat to be subject to price control from the farm to the dinner table.

Heavy hog buying in recent days has moved the market up from $13.50—the price at which retail pork prices are based—to as high as $16. Brown told reporters that hog prices would be "rolled back" and that he did not "think farmers will be dissatisfied with $13.50 hogs."

"That's way above parity," he said when asked how hog ceilings below current market prices would be received by the congressional farm bloc.

Elsewhere it was learned that the Office of Price Administration may announce live hog ceilings between $14.50 and $15 per hundred-

'You've Got to Be Considerate'

Plane Builder Finds a Way To Ease Lady Riveters' Cares

Does the lady riveter arrive for work at the airplane factory and wonder with growing apprehension whether she turned off the electric iron before leaving home?

Does she worry because she can't for the life of her remember shutting off the spigot in the kitchen sink?

L. A. "Jake" Swirbul, vice president and general manager of the Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., at Bethpage, Long Island, has found a way to take these and other household cares off the minds of women workers and thereby reduce absenteeism and increase production of the famed Grumman "Wildcat," Navy fighter.

Swirbul has organized a "motor corps," he told the Truman committee in the Senate yesterday, to turn off electric irons, etc., for women workers. All the woman has to do is tell her troubles to her foreman. The foreman telephones plant headquarters, and a member of the motor corps is dispatched to her house to check up on the iron.

Grumman has equipped a day nursery for working mothers and staffed it with nurses and physicians. Children are fed three meals a day in the nursery to and from which mothers are provided transportation in company buses.

"You've got to be considerate with women," Swirbul said. "You've got to remember that housekeeping has been her business. You haven't begun to solve the manpower problem when you put women on your payroll.

"You've got to see that they have time for shopping and other household tasks. You've got to see that they have peace of mind. You've got to be considerate with women."

Revolt Against Forced Labor Roundup Sweeps Entire Country

By Edward B. Ball
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 9.—Scores of German soldiers and Gestapo agents have been slain in France during the past three days as a result of the campaign of Pierre Laval and Adolf Hitler to round up 400,000 Frenchmen for forced labor in German war industries, a Fighting French spokesman reported tonight.

The mounting popular anger against the high-handed methods of the Nazis and Vichy puppets has resulted in numerous outbreaks among the civilian population, informants said, adding that there has been a sharp increase in attacks on Germans by French guerillas.

Figures on the number of Frenchmen and Germans killed in the last 72 hours were lacking here, but the spokesman said the total of Nazi dead alone might exceed 200.

Reuters reported from the French frontier that extreme tension prevailed in Paris tonight.

Nazis Barricade Streets

The dispatch said German troops had built barricades in many streets and that all hitherto unprotected barracks and officers' canteens were being barb-wired and sand-bagged.

Disorders were said to have broken out all over France with the most serious clashes in Paris, Lyon, Marseille, Brest and industrial centers in Normandy, Britanny and Alsace-Lorraine.

The Fighting French said the stepped-up [illegible] was being concentrated upon men between 20 and 40, both skilled and unskilled, whereas in the past only skilled workers were sought.

Sabotage Increases in Belgium

While the advertised purpose of the roundup is to provide labor for German war plants, some quarters saw in the German campaign an effort to denude the country of all men, fit or unfit.

These sources said such a drive, besides providing needed labor, could be aimed at removing all French manpower possible in order to decrease French resistance when the Allies launch the anticipated continental invasion.

Meanwhile, the Belgian News Agency disclosed a rising tide of

The Moscow radio last night broadcast the complete text of a statement by Lend-Lease Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, citing the amount and character of war supplies shipped to Russia.

The broadcast, picked up in London by Reuter's (British) News Agency, came within 24 hours after Admiral William H. Standley, United States Ambassador to Russia, had charged at a press conference that the Russian people were not being told the full story of American aid to Russia.

The "Standley incident" meantime had kicked up a furor here. Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles said that the sailor-diplomat made his statement without consulting the Government. On Capitol Hill, Admiral Standley's quarterdeck bluntness was both deplored and praised.

Need Seen for Bluntness

So far as could be determined in a casual survey, the American man on the street thought that what Admiral Standley said was in need of being said, particularly in view of Stalin's recent remark that the Red army was bearing the "whole weight of the war."

At any rate, one concrete result of Standley's statement is that the Russian people are now being given a full account of what the United States has been doing to help the Red army.

Lend-Lease Administrator Stettinius, in reports submitted to Congress, has shown that this country has sent to Russia 2600 planes, 3200 tanks, 72,500 trucks, 7700 motorcycles and a vast quantity of other weapons and materials, including three million pairs of boots and 268,000 tons of oil products.

Stalin Started Furor

The Stettinius statement was read over the Moscow radio at "dictation speed," the Associated Press reported from London, indicating that it was to be printed in newspapers throughout Russia.

It was recalled that Stalin's order of the day on the anniversary of the Red army, the order wherein he said that in view of the absence of a second front the Red army was "bearing the whole weight of the war," did not set so well with official Washington.

President Roosevelt appeared to be annoyed when a reporter asked

'Rubbish Heap of Europe'

Career Clinic Speaker Attacks U. S. Idea of Home Furnishings

Chapter two of the Navy Department's career clinic for Government girls, sponsored this week in the Department of Interior Auditorium by the staff of Mademoiselle magazine, last night sent 800 warworkers home presumably to throw out their antique furniture and to concentrate on wider, simplified vistas in the future.

In a session devoted to "design for living," they heard Designer T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings call American homes "the rubbish dumps of Europe—all except the bathrooms and kitchens, which are pure American."

"You are the generation to write a declaration of independence for furniture and architecture," he said. "Do you want your home to be typical of the life you live—or European, like a French marquise? In the past 200 years this country has been forward looking, self-reliant, inventive—with the exception of its designers. The time has come at last when the paralyzing effects of this antique humbug must be broken."

For 30 years, he said, the American home has been on the "sucker list" of decoration magazines that in that span have produced 60 different period styles—"thus bamboozling millions of women into buying all kinds of flapdoodle pieces that should have ended their lives quietly and decently in the scrap heap."

While lambasting "cutie-pie Victorian andirons and cast-iron park benches," Gibbings likewise spared no punches at "pseudo-modern furniture that has been created in a desperate attempt to satisfy the younger generation, but actually as much a part of a period as the early automobiles."

"Such stuff is a mere fad needing French provincial sauce poured over it," he scoffed. "But despite this, a wonderful new architecture has been born in the heart of America. Homes of tomorrow will be part of the landscape furnished with tailored and not overpowering articles in clear and vibrant colors, graceful, simple, unpretentious. Such houses are being seen now on the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West, but they have not yet reached New York, the last place to shake off old world traditions.

"Postwar homes will have large windows, big closets completely fitted, adjustable inner and outer walls that may be thrown open to the sun, lighting controlled by the amount of daylight, air conditioning—and all this will dismiss in the American mind the fear of standardization of design. The day will come when you can turn in your house on a superior model, just like an automobile. And the

Allied Airmen Score

Rommel's Army Falls Back; Futile Attacks Cost 50 Tanks

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 9.—Allied forces in Tunisia seized the initiative on land and in the air today as Field Marshal Erwin Rommel dragged his battered panzer column out of the clutches of the British Eighth Army, leaving 50 wrecked tanks on the battlefield.

American Flying Fortresses and British Lightning Fighters smashed a powerful German air formation over the Sicilian strait, accounting for 19 out of an estimated flight of 50 German planes, to hand Reischmarshal Goering's forces the same kind of thumping that Rommel had received from the British artillery. Two other Nazi planes were destroyed when they collided in air. Only two Allied craft were lost.

While Rommel is noted for his daring, it is difficult to see how he can hope to take the initiative in the south with a new attack in the face of the decisive defeat suffered in his initial try.

German and Italian communiques significantly omitted mention of Rommel's attacks and his subsequent retreat. They were reticent, too, on the score of the air battle off the Tunisian coast except to claim five planes shot down and to say their own planes were protecting a convoy.

(The German radio claimed, however, that recent action by Rommel had "resulted in the conquest or destruction of 38 British tanks and armored cars, 42 antiaircraft guns and heavy antitank guns and 53 motor vehicles." In addition it was asserted that 100 Allied prisoners were taken. It was remarked that the claim as to British tank losses was involved with that of armored cars and so obscured as actually

London, March 9.—Butch, a Flying Fortress which participated in yesterday's raid on Rennes, was shot up by enemy fighters so badly it can never be used again, but it came back on one motor, bringing its crew safely to a midlands airfield.

Three of Butch's four motors were shot to pieces in a 45-minute battle with a pack of Focke-Wulfs, it was disclosed today.

The two motors on the left side were dead and one on the right was sputtering. First Lieut. Robert A. Saunders of Youngstown, Ohio, landed the craft at an airfield 40 miles from its home base after the crew once prepared to bail out.

The sputtering motor caught fire as the craft limped to a stop. The British Convoy Of Seventy Ships Leaves Gibraltar

London, March 9 (AP).—The German radio, quoting dispatches from La Linea, Spain, declared today that one of the largest British convoys ever assembled at Gibraltar had left there yesterday and headed into the Atlantic.

The convoy comprised about 70 merchant vessels and a number of escorting destroyers, said the Berlin broadcast recorded by the Associated Press here.

The broadcast added that a badly damaged United States destroyer had arrived at Gibraltar and unloaded a number of dead and injured.

47 Jap Planes Raid Our Base On New Guinea

Attack Adds Emphasis To Warning of Rising Jap Aerial Strength

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Wednesday), March 10.—Forty-seven Japanese planes have raided Wau, New Guinea, the Allied base some 35 miles southwest of Jap-held Salamaua, the high command announced today.

This heavy raid on an Allied base where last January the Japs suffered one of their biggest aerial defeats of the war added emphasis to a warning by a spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He said Jap aerial strength in the southwest Pacific was growing and that recent Allied victories, such as the sinking of the 22-ship convoy in the Bismarck Sea, should not be allowed to becloud that fact.

Only yesterday, another communique had told of the sinking of an Allied merchant ship by Jap bombers in Oro Bay below Buna, New Guinea.

"Twenty-six enemy bombers escorted by 21 fighters bomber the (Wau) airdrome," today's noon communique stated. "Damage and casualties were light."

Wau is in the area where Allied advance patrols have been throwing the Japs back toward Salamaua.

In February the Japs tried to catch the Allies by surprise and wipe out the Wau Airdrome, but instead, in a one-day battle, they lost more than two score planes.

After that setback, Allied land forces went into action and sent the Japs into retreat toward Mubo, 12 miles south of Salamaua, inflicting losses which exceeded 1000 men.

Today's communique, one of the briefest in recent weeks, reported that an Allied heavy bomber on reconnaissance in the vicinity of Gasmata, New Britain, site of a Japanese airdrome, was attacked by nine Jap fighters, of which four were shot down and another probably destroyed. The Allied plane returned home safely.

Sees Morale Impaired

Kaiser Asks Congress to End Shipyard Interunion Rows

Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, asked Congress yesterday to put an end to jurisdictional disputes between unions on the ground that they undermined the morale of the workers and slowed down production. He also suggested that union membership be frozen for the duration of the war with new workers having the privilege of joining any union they choose or remaining nonunion.

Testifying before the special Senate subcommittee, investigating the national defense, headed by Senator Harry S. Truman, (Democrat) of Missouri, Kaiser declared, "certainly we must stop these jurisdictional quarrels immediately whether by act of Congress or voluntarily. They take the men's minds off their work."

While reiterating his own advocacy of unionism, Mr. Kaiser told of efforts by unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations to replace American Federation of Labor unions in his Oregon shipyard. He testified that the struggle for control there involved nearly 10,000 men now paying the A. F. of L. dues of four million dollars a year.

"I know it isn't good for worker morale to have campaigns going on in the yard as to which union should control," he declared.

Mr. Kaiser revealed the cause of the sinking of a new Kaiser-built tanker in mid-January when the ship buckled and broke in two at her dock. A survey by "competent authorities," he said, showed a steel plate of "very low specification," bearing a number that identified it as a product of the Carnegie

Nazis Hurl In 375,000 Troops, Gain 100 Miles; Battle Continues

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), March 10. The Germans, after withdrawing westward across southern Russia through most of the winter, have launched a giant counteroffensive in the Donets Basin and in a 100-mile march have recaptured eight key cities south and southeast of the big fortress city of Kharkov, the Russians acknowledged early today.

The German offensive was launched late last month with 25 strong divisions, or approximately 375,000 men, including 13 divisions which had been replenished after previous action and 12 fresh ones rushed from the west to this vital sector of the long German-Russian battlefront.

(The National Zeitung of Basel, Switzerland, yesterday quoted an Italian report as declaring that the Germans had withdrawn a total of 340,000 troops from France to the Russian front, and that the transfer was possible because "the Allies have not established a second front.")

Taken in Winter Drive

The Russians acknowledged their evacuation of eight key Donets cities and admitted falling back to the northern bank of the northern Donets River under the impact of the Nazi offensive, but said they took a heavy toll among the enemy with the German deaths alone mounting to 20,000 officers and men.

Russian losses were not mentioned in the announcement made in the regular midnight communique broadcast from Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet Monitor.

The Russians acknowledged giving up the cities of Krasnograd, Lozovaya, Pavlograd, Krasnoarmeisk, Kramatorsk, Barvenkovo, Slavyansk and Lisichansk.

All of these had been taken in the great Soviet winter offensive. The Pavlograd area, about 35 miles short of the Dnieper at its big bend, was the highwater mark of the westward push on this southern sector.

Battles Continue

It is a little more than 100 miles from this region back to Lisichansk, easternmost of the eight recaptured cities, and, as nearly as such things can be measured on an active front, this represented in general terms the extent of the Soviet retreat.

The towns lie in an area from 50 to 150 miles from Kharkov, the

Sen. McClellan Gets Word of Son's Death in Africa

Senator John L. McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansas was notified yesterday that his eldest son, Max, is dead in North Africa. The son, 27, a corporal, died of spinal meningitis. He enlisted in the Army last July and took part in the African invasion in November.

The news came a few hours after former Senator Clyde L. Herring of Iowa was notified that his son, Capt. Clyde E. Herring, is missing in action on the Tunisian front. Herring is senior administrative assistant to the price administrator.

Corporal McClellan's wife is working in the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Democratic Leader Barkley announced McClellan's death to the Senate "with profound regret," adding:

"I know I speak the sentiment of all Senators when I say we deeply sympathize with him in his great loss and that we are deeply affected by his son's sacrifice."

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri joined in an expression of sorrow over the death of McClellan, as well as over the word that Herring's son is missing.

U. S. Fighter Planes Raid Japs in Burma

War Sidelights

Yugolavs Rout Italians, Seize Booty

London, March 9 (AP).—The Moscow radio in a broadcast recorded by the Soviet monitor said today that Yugoslav guerillas captured 17 tanks and routed an entire Italian division in a fierce battle near Mostar in southwestern Yugoslavia.

Several hundred Italians were killed in the engagement and other booty captured included two million rounds of rifle ammunition, 16 guns, 80 machine guns and 6000 shells, the broadcast added.

It said the Yugoslavs also wiped out or captured many German officers and men in another battle south of Danjaluka, 93 miles south of Zagreb, and were still fighting for a mountain peak west of Sarajevo, where the position had changed hands several times.

Japs Hold Raid Drills

New York, March 9 (AP).—Tokyo and Yokohama are having a large-scale air raid drill Wednesday and to make the exercise more realistic captured British and American planes will be flown over the cities, the German radio reported today. The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.

Women to Assume Postwar Burden, First Lady Says

New York, March 9 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that the greatest responsibilities of the postwar period would fall upon women, because "the boys" will come home tired."

Addressing an assembly of Barnard College students, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"Much at home depends on the quality of citizenship of the women. Much of the way we face the future will depend on the courage of our women. The boys will be tired and it will be harder for them to face new things and new thinking."

Americans must "learn through their imaginations" what countries close to the war have learned through experience, the First Lady said, because, "if we don't learn we shall find ourselves isolated from the rest of the world and lacking in their spiritual experience."

Installations Of Foe, Bombed, Machine-Gunned

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, March 9.—United States fighter planes struck at enemy installations in northern Burma yesterday with machine gun fire and light bombs, while R. A. F. bombers raided a Japanese detachment near Kanzauk, 20 miles northeast of Rathedaung, in western Burma, communiques issued today said.

The village of Wa Hat was bombed by the Americans and a large building was destroyed. Bombs were dropped on Maingkwan, in northern Burma 10 miles west of the Chinese border.

Last Saturday American fighters attacked Indaw on the upper Chindwin River, causing two fires, the communique said.

Allied fliers struck again at the Goteik railway viaduct between Mandalay and Lashio, railhead of the Burma Road, on Sunday, scoring three hits on the base of the bridge structure, it was announced.

The American planes returned safely from all the raids

The British announcement of the attack at Kanzauk said:

"In the last few days, in an effort to relieve pressure on their fronts, some small Japanese units have infiltrated westward from the Kaladan River and have taken up positions along the forest ridge between Kanzauk and Auktaungbiin," the war bulletin said.

Tactics of this sort marked the Japanese advance down through the Malay Peninsula and up the river valleys of Burma.

Japs Take Four Towns

Chungking, March 9 (AP).—The Japanese operating from five points west of Shasi on the north bank of the Yangtze River in Hpeh Province, have thrown three columns across the river and captured four towns on the south side, the Chinese high command announced today.

Heavy fighting was said to be continuing, although one of the columns was beaten back with severe losses soon after the initial attack last night.

Tax-Free Tax Unit Bill Reported Favorably

Senator McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday filed a favorable report from the committee on a bill to place the American Tree Association within the purview of the Institutional Tax Exemption Act passed by Congress last session. An identical bill has also been approved by the House committee.

Arnold Forecasts Struggle For Domination of Industry

By the Associated Press

In a speech closing his career as antitrust prosecutor, Thurman Arnold declared last night that economic forces on the home front are struggling not for profits but "for domination of industry after the war."

Arnold, confirmed by the Senate yesterday as a judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, addressed a testimonial dinner at the Statler Hotel attended by many officials in Government and business. The retiring assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division asserted:

New Industrial Age

"The great struggle between economic forces which is going on behind our armies in the field is not a struggle for profit—it is a struggle for domination of industry after the war. That struggle comes from fear of the tremendous productive energy of the new world. We are on the verge of a new industrial age—the age of light metals and chemicals—which may bring a higher standard of living than the world has ever known before, better housing, better transportation, more abundant food.

"New light metals, new forms of transportation, new techniques, may make vast investments obsolete.

"And so the cartel leaders are gathering from all parts of the world to protect their system of high prices and low turnover, restricted production and controlled markets—domestic and foreign—against the new enterprise that is coming after the war."

As an example of what he called the "cartel idea of security for established groups," Arnold cited an agreement under which air freight rates could not be fixed at less than twice the railroad rates.

"Actually," Arnold continued in his prepared speech, broadcast by Mutual, "they were held at five to seven times railroad rates despite the fact that air rates if permitted to seek their proper level would today be less than rail rates . . . And so, at the beginning of the war we had less than 400 commercial planes. Canada, with only 11 million population, was carrying six times the amount of air freight of the United States with 130 millions.

(The Civil Aeronautics Board last week approved new contracts which will terminate the air freight rate provision referred to by Arnold.)

"The Sherman (anti-trust) Act represents our faith in the economics of opportunity. It is dedicated to the principle that the energy and initiative which made America great in the past will make it even greater in the future; that the control of this energy and initiative must not be delegated to any group of experts, however chosen, because the power to control initiative is the power to destroy it.

"The Sherman Acts puts no featherbeds under any industrial group. It compels them to pace for a competitive place in a free world."

Jap Lines Hard Hit, U. S. Strength Grows in Pacific, Knox Says

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

United States strength in the Pacific is mounting while the Japanese are finding their lines of communication difficult to maintain, Secretary of the Navy Knox said yesterday.

But the comparative quiet there may be broken at any moment, he warned. The Pacific situation is now in "a state of suspended animation," he told a press conference in a discussion of consequences of the victory in the Bismarck Sea.

Losses inflicted on the enemy by aircraft and submarines, he said, are part of the process of attrition which will be "a most serious factor" in Japan's military future. While the enemy is suffering constant loss, he said, American forces are stronger in the South Pacific than ever.

U. S. Subs Successful

Their shipping losses, Knox said, will prevent the Japanese in many instances from maintaining their outlying bases and "our submarine campaign continues to be very successful." Asked if it could be said that the enemy is having "extreme difficulty" in moving supplies, he said he would say they were having "increasing difficulty."

The United States, he said, is "growing stronger than we have ever been in the Solomons area" and the Navy is not worried about the Japanese air base at Munda, on New Georgia Island. This base, he said, is bombed almost daily to prevent the Japanese from using it to interfere with American plans, as they might use other bases as well, should they decide to do so.

Nazi Sub Total Rises

In the Atlantic, Knox said, the rate of shipping losses to Axis submarines continues at the level of the last month or two, which is lower than last summer. He said the total number of German submarines in existence undoubtedly has increased, but the number actually in use in the Atlantic has not increased.

U. S. Bombers Raid Kiska

Meanwhile the Navy announced that United States medium and heavy bombers bored through a screen of antiaircraft fire to blast Japanese positions on Kiska in the Aleutians Sunday.

In the South Pacific minor attacks were carried out Sunday night (Solomons time) by Liberator heavy bombers on Kahili and Ballale in the Shortland Islands area and at Vila and Rekata Bay in the Central Solomons.

Text of Navy Communique No. 304:

"North Pacific:

"1. On March 7, U. S. heavy and medium bombers attacked Japanese positions at Kiska. Antiaircraft fire was encountered but no enemy planes intercepted. All U. S. planes returned.

"South Pacific (all dates are east longitude):

"2. During the night of March 7-8, Liberator heavy bombers carried out minor bombing attacks on Japanese installations at Kahili and Ballale in the Shortland Island area, and at Vila and Rekata Bay in the Central Solomons. Results were not observed. All U. S. planes returned."

Brain Specialist Called for Goering, British Suggest

London, March 9 (INS).—A Stockholm dispatch circulated by the Fighting French news agency AFI tonight said Dr. Oliver Croma, noted Swedish specialist in brain and mental disorders, had been summoney to Koenigsberg, Germany, accordling to "trustworthy reports."

The British news agency Reuters pointed out that if Dr. Croma had gone to attend one of Germany's leaders, the signs would indicate it is Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering.

Goering not only is chief of the German air force but also premier of Prussia, of which Koenigsberg is the capital.

Reuters recalled that Goering for a time was an inmate of a mental home in Swaden after the last war.

Standley Statement Delights Germans

Full Status Asked

Army to Seek WAAC Boost To 375,000

As the House Military Affairs Committee considered changing the WAACS from an auxiliary to an "in the Army" status, Secretary of War Stimson yesterday revealed he would seek to get legislation increasing strength of the women's corps from 150,000 to 375,000.

Demands for WAAC units from Army commanders and staffs may run to double that figure, he said.

Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, director of the corps, told the committee she wished WAACS taken into the Army as aid to disciplinary and administrative problems, and to enable them to receive the same insurance and allowance benefits granted enlisted men.

"We have 206 WAACS overseas, but they are not drawing the increased overseas pay granted men," she said.

Also, she pointed out, WAACS do not have "free postage" benefits.

All other military units of women—the WAVES, SPARS, and Marines—are regular parts of their services and not "auxiliaries."

Representative Edith Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts, author of the original WAAC bill, told the committee she favored taking out the "A" which stood for auxiliary and turning the WAACS into WACS.

"I've always favored it, but we were the first group formed and there was lots of opposition. A half loaf at the time was better than no loaf at all. Now the WAACS have won their spurs and proved themselves worthy. They should be granted full status," she said.

Lieut. Gen. G. M. White of the personnel division of the War Department, said the Army desired the change as a recruiting and disciplinary aid.

Since so many of the WAAC's are married to Army men, committee members pointed out, double allowances might be possible under the proposed measure—with checks going to the men from women and to women from men.

General White suggested the wording be changed to prevent "preferential treatment" that might result.

In a letter to the committee, Gen. George Marshall, chief of staff, said the change would cost "very little if any additional money."

WAACS at present are eligible for insurance and retirement benefits under the Civilian Employes Compensation Act. There is but slight difference in the scale of benefit payments under this and those set up for soldiers.

Rationing and shelter allowances for officers are somewhat different and the children and husbands of WAACS at present get no allowances.

General White denied the Army had any intention of sending women to the front lines or equipping them with guns, but said the proposed bill would permit their use to operate antiaircraft instruments

Axis Propagandists Busy; Berlin Urges U. S.-Soviet Break

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The statements on Russia by Ambassador Standley, Vice President Wallace and Undersecretary of State Welles gave the Axis a propaganda field day all over Europe.

All day yesterday the enemy radio—in a dozen languages—made the most of the situations, with subtle distortions and malicious comments, which grew more bold as new statements came out.

By 4:30 p. m. Berlin was suggesting that the United States break off diplomatic relations with the Soviet.

The recordings of widely scattered listening posts and Morse code dispatches intercepted in South America showed that the enemy's handling of the Standley-Wallace-Welles declarations was a text book case of capitalization upon an apparent misunderstanding on the other side.

The Rome radio, in Italian, at 3 a. m., quoted Vice President Wallace as saying the United States should hold out its hand to help India and called this "equivalent to an open criticism of present conditions."

Wallace, the Berlin radio said in Dutch at 10 a. m., was at one and the same time proposing another Versailles treaty and promoting a third world war.

Berlin told North and South America at 9:15 that Ambassador Standley's statement "had caused astonishment in Washington." American observers were declared to see the interview as an attempt to force Washington to clarify its relations with the Soviet.

Three hours later, Rome said in French that there was a great stir in Washington, where the Standley statement was considered evidence of pressure. And half an hour later the Nazi-controlled Mondail station in Paris followed up with the comment that the Wallace speech proved "that nothing good, durable or positive can come out of this marriage of the carp and the rabbit—the Anglo-American and Soviet alliance."

About the same time, Rome said in French that Lisbon reported the Manchester Guardian had declared that "at the present time the anti-Russian feeling is a hundred times stronger in the United States than in England, and that is why Mr. Wallace made his speech."

Meanwhile, a Berlin all-Europe broadcast in German followed up the theme that Standley's remarks had caused a stir in the United States. Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, was quoted as saying: "This news is extremely disturbing and distressing." Also quoted as unhappy over the situation discussed by Ambassador Standley were Senators Tydings and Connally.

The Rome radio picked up this line at 1:30 in a broadcast aimed at North America, which quoted Standley as having threatened the Russians with a shutting down of lend-lease aid. This propaganda suggested that "the misunderstandings between the Allies have suddenly become greater than ever, have very nearly reached the breaking point."

Joseph H. Gooding, D. C. Flying Cadet, Killed in Crash

GOODING

Aviation Cadet Joseph Harold Gooding, jr., 22, an aviation cadet at Bainbridge Field, Ga., and a former Eastern High basketball player, was killed Monday night when his plane crashed near Davidson Field, Ga., his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold Gooding, 4324 Forty-sixth Street Northwest, were informed by the War Department.

Cadet Gooding was on a routine training flight when the crash occurred.

After graduation from Eastern he became a student at George Washington University and enlisted as an aviation cadet last August, qualifying for training as a fighter pilot. After preliminary training he was assigned to Bainbridge Field.

Besides his parents he is survived by his grandmother, Mrs. Sadie Gooding.

His parents operate an interior decorating shop at 4301 Forty-fifth Street Northwest.

D.C. Mother Learns Son Missing Since May Is Prisoner

Word from the Navy Department yesterday that her son was a prisoner of the Japanese in the Philippines was received happily by Mrs. Ether Tinker of 502 A Street Southeast, who had received no news of him since last May, when he was reported missing.

TINKER

Last direct word from Seaman First Class Charles Richard Tinker was a cablegram on Christmas of 1941, a month after he had gone on overseas duty. His mother told The Post yesterday that she was pleased to have assurances he is alive.

Tinker, 22, was born in Knoxville, Tenn., and came to the District in 1938. He attended the University of Arizona before enlisting in the Navy in 1941.

Tinker's wife is in Tucson, Ariz.

6 Billions More for Cargo Ships Approved

A $6,280,000,000 bill carrying four billion dollars in cash and $2,173,000,000 in contract authority for the Maritime Commission to finance the construction of 2161 additional cargo ships was approved yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Reversing House committee action, the Senate group recommended a $3,182,000 expenditure on a proposed high school victory corps to give premilitary training to students.

It refused, however, a proposal to place in the bill a $2,540,000 item asked by the War Manpower Commission and approved by the Budget Bureau to increase the salaries of State employes whose jobs were federalized for the war in the United States Employment Service.

Also to be placed before the Senate as committee-approved amendments will be an appropriation of $2,973,000 to make grants to the States for the care of children of employed mothers, and $1,200,000 for grants for maternity and infant care of the wives of enlisted men.

Committee members said no effort was made to restore to the bill a $200,000 appropriation approved by the Budget Bureau as a supplemental fund for the National Resources Planning Board.

closest being Krasnograd, 50 miles to the southwest.

The inference could be made from the communique that the German advance had been checked at this point, but it was not so stated and it was made clear that the battle still was raging at full fury.

"Fierce battles in which the German Fascist troops are suffering tremendous losses in men and material, especially in tanks, are continuing in the district to the south and west of Kharkov," said the communique.

The Russians in falling back before the powerful onslaught, conducted by "a numerically superior enemy," withdrew northeastward to the region of the northern bank of the northern Donets River, it added.

"Further attempts of the enemy to develop his offensive and force a crossing of the northern Donets River and take Kharkov were met by firm resistance of our troops and the enemy did not meet any success," the communique added.

In the period covered by this great atcion in the south, now disclosed in detail by the Russians for the first time although the Germans had given glimpses of it, the Russians were opening new fronts northwest and west of Moscow.

The 25 Nazi divisions taking part in the offensive included eight tank and five infantry divisions which were replenished after being battered previously, and 12 fresh divisions rushed from western Europe, including four tank, one motorized and seven infantry, the communique asserted.

Russian dispatches had ascribed to the thaw's mud the slowing of the Red army onslaught which had pushed steadily onward from Stalingrad throughout the winter. The westernmost point which had been claimed by the Russians in this southern offensive was the rail junction of Lozovaya, about 65 miles from the Dnieper at its great bend.

Despite the forced evacuation of the eight Donets cities, unofficial military sources in London said that the German counteroffensive would be a definite failure unless the Nazis can take Kharkov.

The latest claims by the Berlin radio have put German forces within 12 miles of Kharkov from the west.

The German high command communique today, after stating that "the winter battle in the east continues with unabated strength,' and that "German troops are masters of the situation on the whole front," went on to state:

"The German attack in the Kharkov area is progressing. The enemy after severe fighting was driven from further lines of resistance. Numerous localities, including the towns of Valki and Lyubotin, were taken by storm."

Valki is about 30 miles west of Kharkov.

The Russians announced advances in general over the remainder of the front, particularly in the area of Vyazma west of Moscow, where the Germans have been falling back under a three-columned attack.

West of Gzhatsk the Russians "continued their offensive and captured several dozen populated places," the midnight communique said, while east of Vyazma "our units broke stubborn German resistance" and captured the railway station and district center of Temkino, to the southeast on the railway to Kaluga from Vyazma. Earlier a front line dispatch to the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said the Reds had reached the upper Dnieper River.

In one incident here the Russians said they freed 1500 Soviet citizens "whom the Hitlerites were attempting to send for hard labor in Germany."

The Russians to the northwest, in the region south of Lake Ilmen, "broke enemy resistance and captured several populated places, including Staro-Ramushevo and Novo-Ramushevo," the communique said.

35-year-old idea of prefabricated houses will become a reality."

Ruth Edwards, Navy Department employe, gave her own budget for living on a $1620 salary.

"After many dismal months in Washington during which I found that $1440 isn't as much money here as it looked in Wisconsin, I have worked out this budget to fit an increase I received not long ago:

"I allot $315 yearly for rent, $395 for food, $235 for clothing, $55.74 for clothing upkeep, including dry cleaning, $43.20 for personal care (allowing only one trip to the hairdresser's each month), $30 for health, $40 for vacation, $25 for Red Cross and other charities, $65 for transportation, $15.94 for miscellaneous fund to provide wedding presents and so on, $150 for war bonds, $81.12 for retirement fund and $144 for income tax."

Hundreds of pencils kept an accurate check with Miss Edwards of each budget item she mentioned.

Soviet Broadcasts Full Report on U. S. Aid to Its Citizens him about Stalin's statement at a press conference on February 23. He said he had only read the headline, and he said everybody knew what headlines did to an article.

Yesterday the White House was silent on the Standley incident.

However, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles was all set with a statement when reporters trooped into his office.

Standley Text Asked

"I have cabled Ambassador Standley, asking him to let us have the text of what remarks he may have made," Welles said.

"I have not received a reply and for that reason, until I have received a reply from the Ambassador, I am not going to comment in any detail on what was said, or alleged to have been said.

"I think I should make it clear, however, that whatever was said in this reported press conference was said without prior consultation with or reference to this Government."

Welles, some thought, did not rule out the possibility that Admiral Standley had been given instructions to stir up publicity on what the United States had been doing for Russia.

"I believe that that understanding and trust exists and I am perfectly confident that anything that Admiral Standley may have said could not have been intended to and did not cast any doubt on that trust and understanding."

Charges Deemed Unfortunate

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat) of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that Admiral Standley's statement was a "most unfortunate one."

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat) of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, used virtually the same language as the Texan, indicating both had been in consultation with the State Department.

They pointed out that Pravda, organ of the Communist Party in Russia, had printed an account of lend-lease aid to Russia in its issue of January 27.

Informed that the Soviet radio had broadcast an account of American lend-lease aid to Russia, Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana told the Associated Press last night that Ambassador William H. Standley "apparently did some good" with his charge "notwithstanding the fact that the State Department repudiated" him.

Wallace's Talk Attacked

Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan took occasion during the Senate debate to comment on the statement of Vice President Wallace that another war will be probable if the United States should "double-cross Russia."

"While the Standley statement is an amazing one," the Michigan Senator said, "I still think it is equally amazing for the Vice President to suggest that America is even capable of double-crossing Russia or anybody else. I want the record to clearly show that our record of cooperation has been an excellent one."

Vice President Wallace later commented on Vandenberg's statement, saying that "the more people who give assurance that the Russians won't be double-crossed the better."

Representative Charles A. Eaton (Republican) of New Jersey had this to say on Admiral Standley's statement:

"Admiral Standley is our Ambassador. He considered it his duty for reasons which must have been strong in his mind to make this statement. If he is right, it is rather a serious situation. It means that our State Department must look into it and straighten it out to head off unnecessary and damaging criticism not only in this country but among the other Allied nations."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican) of New York asserted that while "the Russians don't propose to give up any credit for anything," Admiral Standley's statement would not affect Congressional extension of lend-lease.

Manpower Report Slated for Action

'War Cabinet' Expected to Begin Drafting Summary for President During Session Today

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Five presidential advisers—the so-called "war cabinet" group—were expected to start drafting today a report to the President on manpower preliminary to the making of a high policy decision on going ahead with national service legislation.

Available to the committee which has been investigating for about 10 days are the following views from administrative sources, it was learned:

Officials of the War Manpower Commission were said to be adhering strictly to an announced determination to follow "voluntary methods" of manpower control. However, it was reported that WMC officials believe that the Austin-Wadsworth national service measure is defective in placing primary responsibility with Selective Service boards and in failing to prescribe controls over employers comparable to controls contemplated over workers.

Officials of the War Production Board including War Produceion Chief Donald M. Nelson were represented as opposing national service legislation at this time on the ground that "voluntary methods are working effectively, and that much remains to be done which can be done by voluntary means.

WMC Chairman McNutt was said to be determined to stay "off a limb" on the question of national service legislation unless it is clear that President Roosevelt is prepared to indorse so-called "compulsory" measures.

McNutt once stated that he regarded national service legislation as "inevitable" at a time when he believed the Presidetn also favored legislation. Subsequently, the President openly supported voluntary controls, and McNutt changed his stand.

The President's five-man committee has been meeting regularly in the White House under the chairmanship of Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes. Other members include Bernard Baruch, head of the World War I Industries Board; Harry Hopkins, special presidential lend-lease adviser; Admiral William D. Leahy and Judge Samuel I. Rosenman.

Manpower officials were said to feel that the Austin-Wadsworth bill which has held the spotlight on Capitol Hill recently places the responsibility for choosing men for a labor draft in the Selective Service boards, which are already overburdened with work, and in any event are not equipped with the technical knowledge needed to make decisions about the kind of work a man would do.

Perhaps more fundamentally, they object to the measure on the ground that it provides no control over employers. The measure does not clearly require employers to accept employes referred under any labor draft, they contend. Under the measure, the War Manpower Commission would have no authority to see that an employer uses his workers at highest skills or conforms to anti-pirating and anti-hoarding labor standards.

Nelson and other WPB officials were said to recognize that the country faces a very tight labor supply pinch in the coming months, but that up to date, manpower shortages have not hampered war production.

Nelson is said to be hopeful that reserve supplies of labor may be secured from industries which have overestimated their labor requirements. It is said that many firms hired considerable numbers of excess workers in anticipation of future needs, but now find that they can use fewer workers because of increased industrial efficiency.

Flames Damage Wormley School; Classes Continue

A two-alarm fire believed caused by a defective flue broke out at the Wormley School, 3200 Prospect Avenue Northwest, yesterday, a hour before classes were to convene.

The blaze was confined to the flooring between the boiler room and the first floor, doing an undetermined amount of damage. It is thought, however, classes will be resumed this morning.

DeWitt Long, janitor, of the school—an elementary unit for Negro children—discovered the blaze. Pupils were moved to another building of the two-school group—the Phillips School—and missed an expected holiday.

In spite of her husband's concern for the lion's welfare the animal died, she said, but so did the romance

Spain Protests Book Critical of Franco

By the Associated Press

Juan Francisco de Cardenas, the Spanish Ambassador, was reported yesterday to have protested to the State Department against publication of Thomas J. Hamilton's book, "Appeasement's Child: The Franco Regime in Spain."

Reviewers reported that Hamilton's book criticized the Franco regime in Spain, the State Department's policy toward it and advocated establishment of a Spanish government-in-exile.

A diplomatic source, which cannot be quoted, said the representations, made several days ago, were based on the fact that Hamilton, former New York Times correspondent in Madrid and Washington, now is a lieutenant in the United States Navy. The Spanish Ambassador is understood to have taken the view that government regulations forbid an officer from making statements that might be detrimental to relations with a neutral country.

A Spanish source said the embassy regarded the book as propaganda. Certain references to Ramon Serrano Suner, former foreign minister and brother-in-law of Gen. Francisco Franco, this source said, were considered particularly offensive.

The representations in the Hamilton case were reported to have been stronger than those against the filming of a screen story based on Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The Ambassador some time ago expressed his unfavorable opinion of the book as movie material. In this case, too, the embassy took the view that the film was intended as propaganda against the Franco regime.

Union of South Africa Acts to Halt Axis Spies

Capetown, Union of South Africa, March 9 (AP).—Striking at Axis espionage rings operating in Portuguese East African territory, the government of the Union of South Africa today closed a portion of the border with Mozambique.

The step was regarded as a special safeguard for convoys whose movements have been reported by Axis spies said to be operating at the east Portuguese port of Lurenco Marques.

200 Nazis Slain in France

anti-German sabotage in Belgium, reporting the bombing of a locomotive workshop, a chateau used by the German army, an electric power station, railway installations and a mine shaft—all in a single night recently.

The agency said the attacks, most of which occurred near Charleroi, were carried out under the noses of German guards although they had been reinforced in anticipation of such outbreaks. In reprisal, the Nazis deported 20 residents of Antwerp and ordered a 9 p. m. curfew.

Norwegian sources reported that four Serbian prisoners of war were executed at Trondheim after the discovery of a plot to dynamite army barracks. The four were chosen at random from among 150 and their comrades were forced to watch the execution.

Reports to the Fighting French gave this picture:

In Paris and other French cities, patriots battled in the streets as the collaborationist government shipped 50 contingents of French workers from Marseille to Germany in partial fulfillment of Laval's promise to Hitler.

French guerillas overpowered sentries in the Rue de la Borde of Paris and seized a garage which they held for more than an hour, then set a fire which destroyed all the vehicles.

Guerillas at Lille killed 23 German officers and made four other attacks on German-occupied buildings in the past three days.

Small but sharp street battles broke out at Brest among German troops and French patriots, following attacks by guerilla fighters against Nazi personnel and property.

In one incident, patriots were reported to have made a daylight hand-grenade attack on a theater reserved for German soldiers. The De Gaullists said this attack was made at a moment when Hitler's picture appeared on the screen and resulted in the killing of two Germans and injuries to many others.

Two more Germans were said to have been killed in another hand grenade attack on Brest' Hotel de la Poste and others injured in the bombing of troops in their quarters. Hand-to-hand fighting followed these attacks, the Fighting French said, and the guerillas suffered slight losses.

Other recent anti-German activity, the Fighting French said, included a grenade attack by patriots on a naval canteen in, Lorient where a German sentry was killed and several officers wounded; the dynamiting of a 13-car train loaded with military supplies at Rochefort and the sabotage of railway locomotives at La Rochelle.

plane also was shredded by cannon and machine-gun fire. Butch will be junked, but the crew had the satisfaction of definitely shooting down three enemy planes, with another one probably destroyed.

"It was our fifteenth trip into enemy territory and by far our worst," said Saunders. "We were attacked by the largest group of enemy fighters I have ever seen before we reached the target."

Staff Sergt. Harry E. Gibbs of Evanston, Wyo., said "one of the first blasts hit the No. 4 engine, but I didn't tell the pilot about it. It didn't seem to be damaged badly then."

Just before arriving over the target, Second Lieut. Pelham R. Burnett of 4116 Kathland Avenue, Baltimore, Md., copilot, related, "the cannon burst tore into the left wing, knocking out one motor and badly damaging the other one on that side."

Another shower of machine gun bullets and cannon fire tore holes in the side of the radio operator's cabin and exploded one oxygen unit, causing a fire which soon was put out.

The fighters came head-on toward the Fortress, weaving and twisting.

"It looked sometimes like we'd crash head-on," said Second Lieut. Warren W. Anderson, bombardier, of Lawrence, Kans., who shot down one of the three Nazis.

The Flying Fortress was crippled to such an extent that Saunders ordered the crew to don parachutes, preparatory to abandoning the ship over northern France. Although dropping steadily from 19,000 to 2000 feet, the crew decided to try to reach England.

"All the time those Focke-Wulfs kept nipping at us," continued Second Lieut. Earl W. Quillman of Erie, Pa., navigator. "It was tougher than any of our other dogfights. Our gunners were busy all the time."

Staff Sergts. Rush J. London of Sand Springs, a suburb of Tulsa, Okla., and Richard G. Koretke of Naperville, Ill., got the other two Focke-Wulfs and Staff Sergt. William T. Nolan of New York City claimed the probable one.

Other members of the crew were Staff Sergts. Paul L. Clatfelter of Los Angeles, Calif., and Clyde Willey of Portland, Oreg.

"When we finally found a spot to land, the plane had only 200 feet of altitude," said Saunders, and added, "luckily we headed in the right direction because we couldn't maneuver anymore."

Ceiling Planned On Live Hog Price

weight, or from $2.25 to $1.75 above the Government's support price for hogs.

Dollars and cents prices on pork products were announced recently by OPA to become effective April 1 and to be preliminary to similar ceilings on other meats and meat products.

Brown's disclosure that hogs would be put under price control and that ceilings on other livestock might follow, recalled his controversy with Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard and beef producers who have firmly resisted all moves to freeze prices on meat animals. Only last week, Brown declared that new ceiling prices on pork would be given a "chance to work" before an attempt would be made to put a lid on hog prices.

Rising livestock prices have seriously "squeezed" packers, who must operate under price control.

Brown conferred with the special Banking-Finance subcommittee, at his own request, and for the purpose, he said, of explaining his belief that OPA has no direct authority over profits, that this field must be left to war contract renegotiation and to taxation. These operations, he observed, fall within the legislative realm of the two committees represented at the conference.

Brown called reporters' attention to a provision of law that price regulation must be of general application and that, therefore, OPA is barred from reaching profits of individual producers through regulation of prices.

Brown, who was a member of both the Banking and Finance committees when he was a Senator from Michigan, appeared before the subcommittee after Finance Committee Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia, criticized OPA for what he said was a tendency to reach for industrial profits through price control.

Banking Committee Chairman Wagner (Democrat) of New York, told reporters that subcommittee members were "very much gratified at (Brown's) efforts so far."

Half of Pentagon's Employes Use Buses

Approximately half of the 30,000 men and women employed in the Pentagon Building travel to and from work by bus and the remaining half by private automobiles, the War Department reported yesterday. Its survey was part of a program to encourage greatest use of private motor pools.

of the Navy and the Maritime Commission, and approved finally by the President.

"They have thus had the benefit," he asserted, "of all the brains, accumulated research, and judgment which our governmental machinery provides for that purpose. They have not been worked out in disregard of, but in full reference to, our program of shipbuilding and production of equipment."

Governing the decisions on the size of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, Stimson said, were the combat plans of the armed forces, integrated with careful estimates of supply possibilities.

"The armed forces, the men who are going into actual combat," he declared, "have placed their house in order. Their spirit and their program are all that patriotism and careful planning can effect. I now ask whether industry and agriculture should not likewise be put on a more efficient wartime basis. When you are driving a team of horses and one of them goes lame, you do not lame the other horse to equalize the team. You try to get two sound horses."

Stimson, reiterating advocacy of compulsory manpower legislation to replace the present voluntary system, first expressed in a letter to Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina of the Senate Military Committee, February 27 said:

"I have reached the conclusion that one of the reasons why industry and agriculture and the whole civilian population have not moved more rapidly toward an all-out effort is that we have relied almost entirely on voluntary cooperation.

"This voluntary cooperation would work with a large part of our population as soon as they clearly understood the need for it. But the effect of the recalcitrant or thoughtless few is so great upon the minds and efforts of others that I am convinced that the only way to accomplish the result which we must all reach is through a General Service Act. This has proved true in England, and I believe it is now true here.

"The issue between the proponents of the Army program and its critics, in my opinion, largely narrows down to this difference: The leaders of the Army are trying, by shortening the war, to save the lives of thousands of young Americans—lives vital to the future of this country.

"The opponents of the Army program are trying to avoid present trouble—the inconveniences and relatively minor sacrifices which would be involved in a more thorough and drastic reorganization of our industrial and civilian life for the remaining period of this war.

"I firmly believe that when the true situation is understood by the American people, there will be no doubt as to their decision."

Axis Armies' Strength

How big are the Axis armies?

Upholding the United States Army's plans for a total strength of 8,200,000, Secretary of War Stimson said last night that America's enemies have about 17 million men under arms.

Estimates based on the best available information, he said in his radio speech, are that Germany and her allies have 14 million men in Europe, and "Russia and Britain together have a much smaller number." In Asia, he said, the Japanese have approximately three million men under arms.

PROTECTING THE FAMILY

$590,000 A DAY is the rate at which benefits were paid in 1942 by The Equitable. Behind this impressive figure are thousands of human stories, many from families in this State.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA families received Equitable benefits amounting to $1,591,662 last year. Of this, $535,200 was paid to widows, children and other beneficiaries—holding families together, providing funds for education, clearing homes of mortgage debt, and accomplishing many other cherished purposes. In addition, $248,453 in annuity payments brought comfort and peace of mind to older persons. Policyholders in the DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA also received $808,009 in matured endowments, dividends and other payments.

The flow of these benefits to families in this State and all other States, totaling $215,354,000 for 1942, is doubly important in wartime because it helps strengthen the home front, benefiting not only individual families but the communities in which they live.

SERVING THE NATION

In direct aid of the war effort, The Equitable purchased $489,999,000 of U. S. Government securities last year.

Other funds are invested in essential industries helping win the battle of production, in public utilities, producing power for victory, and in railroads, performing vital transportation service. These assets, while providing family security, are at the same time contributing to the economic stability of the nation.

Because family security helps national morale, it is particularly significant that the life insurance protection provided by The Equitable increased $359,025,000 in 1942 to $7,966,328,000.

The premiums paid on life insurance policies represent funds flowing into a useful, permanent channel of thrift and help the Government's efforts to check rising living costs.

It is in the national interest to own life insurance and to buy additional life insurance if the present protection of your family is inadequate.

Looking ahead, the one great hope of all Americans is for a speedy conclusion of the war, with victory for a way of living that upholds the dignity and freedom of man. The Equitable is resolved to meet its every responsibility to the nation to help bring this about.

Father-Draft Rider Seen on Farm Bill

Wheeler's Move Threatens Measure Asking Deferment of Agricultural Workers

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Over protests of the Senate's battling farm bloc, Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana yesterday threatened to insert an amendment prohibiting the drafting of fathers into the Bankhead measure making mandatory the military deferment of agricultural workers engaged in the production of essential commodities.

Arguing that the food situation will get "worse and worse and worse" if the War Department continues its plans for an Army of 11 million men, Wheeler insisted on the Senate floor that handling of the manpower problem has been basically wrong because it has operated on the "big Army theory" that took no account of agricultural and other home-front needs.

"Manpower is being wasted in industry and right here in the Government," he said, declaring that no more should be wasted by the drafting of married men with children, which "tears up the American home."

"Farm Freeze" Feature Out

Senators voting to save the bill, which is opposed by Selective Service and the War Department, earlier had eliminated the "farm freeze" feature which might have brought a veto from the White House. Last night they expressed fear the Wheeler amendment—if insisted upon—would carry the same veto threat.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado offered the substitute measure that skipped mention of the original Bankhead section prohibiting agricultural workers from taking other jobs without consent of their draft boards. As now before the Senate, the bill merely calls for draft deferment for all men "engaged or employed substantially full time on a farm in connection with the production or harvesting" of commodities rated essential to the war effort.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming declared the workers should be employed full time and producing a full number of agricultural units.

Johnson insisted, "Farmers would rather go to war than try to figure out their status under the unit or point system," which has been used in deferring agricultural workers and for which War Manpower Commissioner McNutt has promised a simplification.

Gives Example

"For instance," Johnson said, "one unit may mean the milking of one cow, the raising of 5 acres of dried beans, the feeding of 20 cattle. One acre of strawberries is 1½ per cent of one war unit. Nineteen acres of Irish potatoes multiplied by their conversion value of 0.5 gives a farmer the number of deferment units they are worth.

"This whole system of figuring out the war essentiality of food products is the product of the brain trust."

Majority Leader Barkley, declaring himself "on the fence," said he doubted the wisdom of writing into the law deferment for any particular class. "How are the farmers who already have lost their help going to feel?" he asked.

Senator Johnson replied it was unfortunate farm deferment had not been the policy since 1941, but declared the question now is what "we are going to do about the famine we find facing us all over the world."

German Cargo Ships Reported Scuttled

Bombay, India, March 9 (AP).—Messages received here today said German cargo ships sheltering at Mormugao, a Portuguese possession on the west coast of India, had been scuttled after a disagreement among the crews on the question of making an attempted dash for Singapore.

D.C. Exceeds Quota For Series E Bonds For Third Month

For the third straight month, the District has exceeded its quota of Series E War Bonds, selling $6,667,000 worth in February, or $267,000 more than the quota assigned Washington by the Treasury Department, it was announced yesterday.

Since last December 1, when Series E quotas were inaugurated, District sales, up to March 1, totaled $22,538,000, nearly 10 per cent above the combined monthly quotas for that period. Sales here are well above the national average, and average per capita purchases rank at, or near, the top in the Nation, according to the District War Savings Committee, which attributes this record to systematic buying, continuance of the stamp album clearance drive and the efforts of the Women's War Savings League.

Senior Deputy Hamm Resigns in OPA Shakeup

The resignation of John E. Hamm as senior deputy OPA administrator was announced by OPA Chief Prentiss M. Brown yesterday in what was another move by Brown toward reorganization of the structure and policy of the price agency.

Hamm, whose resignation will not become effective until July 1, came to OPA in June of 1940, under appointment of Leon Henderson, his close friend. At that time, he was assistant director of consumer credit studies at the Russell Sage Foundation.

The first top Henderson casualty of the new regime, Hamm is to stay on for the time being "to help out." In the meantime, Brown said, a new senior deputy "with Nation-wide organizational experience" will be appointed.

Brown's acceptance of the resignation was said to have been prompted almost entirely by a desire to have a front-office man fully sympathetic with the OPA chief's new price policies. Although formally commending Hamm for his "splended service," Brown specifically stated that he wanted a "man from the business world."

In seeking a business man, Brown is not only giving expression to his own philosophy, but is following up congressional criticism of too many "economists" in OPA.

Hamm's main job in the remaining months will be to check and advise Brown on a current survey instituted to simplify the entire OPA structure. Chairman of the survey committee is former Senator Clyde L. Herring of Iowa, who has just been made senior assistant to Brown.

The survey committee's specific job, as outlined by Brown, is to deal almost wholly with personnel and administrative efficiency, while Brown is to deal with matters of policy entirely.

Actions of this committee and Brown himself are being closely watched by other top Henderson men still in OPA. These officials, it was said, are particularly watchful of any attempts to make OPA a political pay-off agency to the detriment of the price program.

Brown, forging ahead in his announced policy of making price ceilings and rationing "popular," has already established close relations with Capitol Hill and yesterday added labor to his line of thought.

In the labor move, he instructed district office managers to proceed at once with formation of district labor advisory committees which will work with OPA officials in ironing out existing problems in price control, rationing and rent control.

Labor members, he said, would also be added to rationing or price panels of local boards in industrial areas. The size of district labor advisory committees, he said, would vary from three to 12 members, depending on the size of the area.

Insane Asylum's Publicity Bill Held 'Robbery'

Denver, March 9 (INS).—Is it necessary for a State insane asylum to have a press agent?

That question was brought up today in the Colorado Legislature, as it was disclosed that the State for the last five years has been paying $200 a month to a Pueblo newspaperman to publicize the State mental hospital.

One legislator called the hiring of the press agent "highway robbery" from the taxpayers' funds and added:

"We don't need a publicity man to tell the rest of the Nation that we have nuts."

Senate Members of 2 Directorates Renamed

The Vice President yesterday reappointed the Senate's representatives on the board of directors of the Columbia Hospital for Women and the Columbia Institution for the Deaf. Senator Radcliffe (Democrat) of Maryland was renamed to the hospital directorate, while Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah will continue on the board of the other.

Coffee-Wise

In coffee, it's quality rather than quantity that counts. That's why the coffee-wise are making sure that every cup of coffee they serve offers the very best there is in coffee . . . flavor, aroma, inspiration and sheer taste joy.

To make every cup a super one, choose the brand carefully, make the coffee with meticulous care, and drink it slowly, musing over its goodness. One really delicious cup of coffee is worth any number of inferior cups.

BUYING COFFEE—Get your coffee only as you need it, and your coffee will be fresher. Always be certain to get the right grind for your method of brewing coffee.

Regular Grind for percolator or for boiling . . . Drip Grind for drip and vacuum makers. To hold its fragrance and flavor, keep your coffee in a tightly covered can or jar. If bought in packages or bags, pour it into a cannister or fruit jar and keep covered.

A CLEAN POT pays dividends in flavor. Scrub yours well so that there are no specks of old coffee lurking in the basket or in the sides of the pot.

MEASURE ACCURATELY both the coffee and the water, and use standard measures for uniform results. For average coffee strength we suggest 1½ to 2 level tablespoons of coffee for each standard measuring cup of water. (A standard measuring cup equals from 1½ to 1⅔ dinner cups.) However the quantity of coffee to use depends on how strong you like it. You'll not get as good results if you use a large pot for a small amount of coffee. If you want only a small amount of coffee, make it in a sauce pan using the good old-fashioned boiled method. Avoid leftover coffee.

Percolator Coffee—Use either hot or cold water. Start timing when the "perking" begins and "perk" slowly for 7 to 10 minutes.

Boiled Coffee—Add coffee to cold water in pot or sauce pan, let it come to a rolling boil, remove from heat and allow a few minutes for the grounds to settle. Strain and serve.

Drip Coffee—Pre-heat pot. Pour boiling water into top compartment and allow to drip slowly through the coffee. The dripping time should take from 6 to 8 minutes to obtain the peak of flavor and aroma.

Vacuum Coffee—Have water in lower bowl boiling before fitting upper bowl in place. Begin timing when the water rises and comes in contact with the coffee. Control the heat so that the coffee and water are infused together in from 5 to 7 minutes.

2 D. C. Men Honored For Exploits in Air

Sergts. Noble and Hendry Awarded Navy Decorations for Bravery in Action

Recognition of two Army Air Corps sergeants from the Washington area for their exploits in action over the Solomon Islands was announced by the War Department yesterday.

Technical Sergt. Charles M. Noble, son of Mrs. Charles M. Noble of 900 North Wayne Street, Arlington, Va., was one of 15 men awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action; while the Air Medal for meritorious achievement has been given to Staff Sergt. Leonard L. Hendry, son of James C. Hendry of 3400 Upshur Street, Brentwood, Md.

The Silver Star is Noble's fourth decoration since he has been in the service. Missing since the loss of his plane December 28, he had previously received the Oak Leaf Cluster, Air Medal and Distinguished Service Cross.

Attacked Task Force

The most recent award was for "gallantry over the Solomon Islands in August and October, 1942." On August 24 the citation read: "Technical Sergert Noble was one of the combat crew of the lead ship of a two-airplane flight attacking an enemy surface task force consistnig of a carrier, two destroyers and two cruisers. Despite heavy enemy antiaircraft fire and the attack of seven Zeros, direct bomb hits were scored on the carrier, and the two Zeros were shot down by the crew."

On October 15 he was part of the crew of the lead ship of a three-airplane flight en route to attack enemy shipping in harbor, when there was sighted an enemy task force of four transports, four cruisers and seven destroyers. A bombing run was made, but as the bombs failed to release, a second run was necessitated, through very heavy antiaircraft fire and several attacks by 10 to 12 Zero airplanes. Probable hits resulted on a transport, and at least two Zeros were shot down.

"In that and subsequent missions, some 10 Zeros have been reported shot down by the same crew. On December 28, on a search mission, they were attacked by Zeros, were reported shot down, and are at present listed as missing in action."

Sergeant Noble, 24, of Jacksonville, Fla., has been with the Army since 1939, enlisting at the end of his freshman year at the University of Maryland. He was preparing for a premedical course and was a member of the R. O. T. C. He received his flight training at Hickman Field, Hawaii, where he was stationed during the Pearl Harbor attack.

His father, Lieut. Comdr. Charles M. Noble 2d, is on duty in the Pacific with the Seabees. Formerly he was special highway engineer for the Pennsylvania Turnpike, chief highway engineer for the Pentagon Building, and was associated with the Port of New York Authority on several projects.

Hendry's citation was "for meritorious achievement on September 11, 1942, while participating in an air photographic mission over the Solomon Islands area." Sergeant Hendry and other members of a single plane flight had encountered a Japanese air formation of approximately 30 bombers and 20 fighters over Lunga Point, Guadalcanal. The American gunners succeeded in destroying at least four of the attacking enemy fighters during a 10-minute fight.

A native of the District, Hendry will be 22 on March 22. He attended the Brentwood School and Mount Rainier High School and was employed as a mechanic with Call Carl before his enlistment July 2, 1940.

Sent overseas the following September, Hendry was stationed at Hickam Field during the attack on Pearl Harbor. He received several subsequent transfers and was awarded the Silver Star for his service in the Battle of Midway. A letter received by his family two days ago informed them that he was pleased with his work and had been made a staff sergeant.

Among the 76 men for whom the War Department announced awards of air medals were Lieut. Col. Joseph D. Caldara of Mount Savage, Md.; First Lieut. Milton E. Wills, jr., of Petersburg, Va.; Second Lieut. Isaac L. Epperley, jr., of Martinsville, Va., and Corpl. George R. Graham of Jonesville, Va.

Navy Air Station Extends Tribute To Capt. Thomas

Tribute was paid to Capt. Robert E. Thomas, Civil Engineer Corps, U. S. N., yesterday by the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., which Captain Thomas helped to develop during his stay there as public works officer between 1925 and 1929. Captain Thomas was reported missing on a flight plane from Pearl Harbor to San Francisco January 24.

At one time with the Bureau of Yards and Docks in the Navy Department here, Captain Thomas was in charge of the bureau in the Pacific area at the time of his death. His wife lives in Seattle, Wash.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

● Why is Fleischmann now able to offer a popular whiskey that in body, flavor, and full golden smoothness equals the world's finest and most limited brands? Here is why. Because we believe that 8 out of every 10 men who try Fleischmann's PREFERRED will keep on buying it. This will mean big sales. Big sales will mean big economies. These economies will justify our trying to popularize such a superb whiskey.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety. Creamy. Full. Delicious. Try just one pint of this golden whiskey! Taste it. Enjoy every delicious drop! You'll be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream - to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

TUNE IN TO WRC—980 ON YOUR DIAL...

AND A WINDOW OPENS ON THE WORLD!

YOUR Washington station, WRC, is not only the nation's listening post—the station that keeps America informed about events in the capital . . . It also brings you news from the whole wide world.

You hear on-the-spot broadcasts from London, Moscow, Cairo, Australia—from everywhere news is made!

You enjoy the keen analyses of the nation's finest commentators!

You get the latest news-reports, compiled from the stories of no fewer than 100,000 AP, UP, INS, and NBC reporters!

Obviously, such complete and authoritative news-coverage would be far beyond the reach of any single station. A nation-wide network and a world-wide organization of news-facilities are required.

Yet America's system of free radio and network operation makes all these benefits available to you at 980 on your dial. Here are the simple facts:

WRC is one of the 143 stations of the NBC Network. The National Broadcasting Company owns WRC and five other stations that are great originating-points for news. The other 137 NBC stations are independently owned Affiliates. But ALL of the news services and other features, made possible by the NBC network operation, are available to ALL of these stations alike!

As a result, Washington, the city that makes the most news, has a radio news-center worthy of its stature.

To keep abreast of the times and ahead of opinion, tune in—and stay tuned in—to 980 on your dial!

DO YOU KNOW...

that the National Broadcasting Company is currently devoting an average of three hours a day to the war effort! . . . This means hundreds of programs, tens of thousands of announcements, contributed by America's Free Radio to the cause of Freedom.

Pay-As-Earn Plan Gains

starting current collections by a 20 per cent withholding tax.

Other Plans Rejected

Two others turned down by the committee were these:

The plan of Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, to wipe out the first bracket liability for everyone, a maneuver that would call for canceling the 1942 tax in full for those subjected only to the combined 6 per cent normal and first 13 per cent surtax, and giving all others 19 per centage points of cancellation. Amounts above the 19 per cent would continue to be paid on the present tax timetable, the year after the income was received.

The plan of Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, to apply the rates of 1941—more favorable for the individual taxpayer—to collect the tax on 1942 income, and spread payment of this liability over several years.

The special discount would speed many individuals into the paid-up category, it was said. One member pointed out that a large percentage of individuals in the past had been used to paying their income tax in full on March 15, and another sizable group paid up by June 15. These could be expeteed to jump at a 10 per cent or 5 per cent discount feature.

As a result, it was pointed out, a large number of individuals might voluntarily double up this year to get on a partly current basis. They would pay off their 1942 obligation in full by June 15. Under the tentative plan, they would be subjected to a withholding tax on salary or wages starting July 1, the bulk of the withholding levy would go to settle the tax on 1943 income, leaving the balance of their tax bill for 1943 income to be met next year. Those who paid but half their tax on 1942 income by June 15, would be using their withholding levy to discharge the rest of their bill on 1942 income.

Illinois Steel Corporation was chiefly responsible for the accident.

"That was only one factor," he added. "The ship was launched in comparatively warm water on the coldest day of the winter. The fore and aft tanks were loaded but not the center tanks. She was under every strain possible at the moment she broke."

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, swiftly followed up Kaiser's testimony with a statement in which he "wholeheartedly" agreed that "jurisdictional disputes in these war times are intolerable."

"We of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L. have several times offered to sign a no-raiding agreement with the C. I. O.," Frey declared. "I hereby renew that offer and will be glad to discuss it fully before the committee."

The West Coast shipbuilder showed members of the committee designs for bar pins which are to be used to decorate workers who stay on the job. He said he believed the decorations would help reduce unauthorized absences.

As he testified before this group, there were these other labor developments:

1. The House Labor Committee decided to undertake its own inquiry into absenteeism and call Secretary of Labor Perkins as the first witness late this week. It also approved a resolution asking that the House authorize it to make a general inquiry into the labor situation.

2. The House Naval Committee, already holding hearings on absenteeism, heard John Green, president of the C. I. O. Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union, and Lewis G. Hines, A. F. L. national legislative representative, oppose legislation requiring employers to report to draft boards the names of workers habitually absent from work without good cause.

Rommel Retreats, Attack Cost Axis 50 Tanks

to give nothing specific as to tanks alone.)

The Allies made no mention of attacking a convoy, but it was presumed here that the Fortresses carried out their attacks despite opposition.

In northern Tunisia small German attacks resulted in the end in gains for the British First Army which counterattacked and forced the Axis troops back.

Rommel's retreat in the south was carried out under attack of Allied fighter-bombers.

Having suffered far heavier losses than earlier reports had indicated in his assaults of the weekend—an Allied communique revised upward from 33 the total number of German tanks left on the field—Rommel apparently was withdrawing his forces into the protective terrain southwest of the Mareth Line.

"The total of enemy tanks definitely in our hands following the battle of March 6 is now 50," the Allied command announced.

"This high number is made up of three Mark IIs'; two Mark III's; eight new-type Mark III's with 75-millimeter guns; 19 Mark III Specials, and 18 Mark IV Specials."

(In previously reporting Rommel's loss of 33 tanks the Allied command specifically stated that not a British tank had been lost. While this observation was not repeated, nothing was said of any Allied tank loss.)

In yet another southern Tunisian sector the Allied line moved steadily eastward, with the French occupation of the town of Tozeur, 50 miles southwest of Gafsa, and Allied patrols reported operating on the outskirts of the latter point.

The Morocco radio reported that Gen. Henri Giraud's French forces, under the command of General DeLay, occupied the whole area northwest of Chott Djerid in southwestern Tunisia after capturing the towns of Nefta and Tozeur.

Allied successes also were hammered out in northern Tunisia. Enemy attacks near Tamera, seven miles west of Sedjenane, were thrown back in heavy fighting yesterday in which nearly 200 Axis troops were taken prisoners.

German Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim threw in two small attacks north and west of Sedjenane today, but the attackers were scattered at once and retreated with heavy losses. Another local German attack was launched on the Beja-Mateur road. It, too, was repulsed and the Nazis lost ground there.

The Tamera fighting in the north of Tunisia, where the British broke a two-column attack on the positions along the Mateur-Tabarka road was said by Associated Press Correspondent William B. King to have been at the range of 30 to 40 yards in some places.

In a delayed dispatch from the front, King reported that the enemy's casualties were estimated at five times those of the British.

The southernmost enemy column, he added, achieved a considerable initial advance before a British counterattack threw it back. The upper enemy column, meanwhile, was allowed to advance without opposition until it reached a dip in the terrain. There, British troops opened fire from both enemy flanks at close range and the Germans, fleeing the ambush, were then caught up in heavy fire from British machineguns placed on a commanding ridge.

(The German radio reported that in this area Nazi forces had "come up against stronger resistance and had to cease their movements for the time being at least." The German radio reported also that American troops had joined the British First Army in the North.)

STRAIGHT RYE WHISKEY

Bill never did like big talk...

Fourth of July orators made him squirm. Election-day speakers made him mad. He hated big words and fancy talk.

Nobody had to sell the war to Bill. He saw his duty and left a good paying job to go and do it.

If you were to ask Bill today to set down in writing the things he is fighting for, he probably wouldn't talk about great concepts like the Four Freedoms, or free enterprise, or the dignity of man.

He'd say simply: "I am fighting for my home and my wife and the kids I hope we'll have some day. I am fighting for my right to sit in a sunlit picnic grove with my family . . . my right to criticise, over a coke or a highball, the Brooklyn Dodgers or the men in Washington . . . the privilege of watching my son grow in the image of me and my wife instead of some dictator."

These are a few of the thousands of "little freedoms" that add up to the American way of life—and that essentially is what Bill is fighting for. He'll do his job and we folks back home must get on with our job.

There is much to do and not much time to be wasted talking about it. In the column on the right we are printing a check list to serve as a reminder of the jobs that have to be done by us at home.

We at National Distillers don't like big talk any more than Bill does. We wish to state simply that we, like the rest of the distilling industry, are devoting our entire production facilities 100% to war alcohol—used for munitions, rubber, medicines and many other essential war needs, and are producing no whiskey today.

Check this list. It will help you decide—
WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP WIN THE WAR?

- I regularly buy War Stamps and Bonds—at least 10% of my income.
- I pay my taxes on time and in full.
- I avoid unnecessary expenditures in order to help prevent inflation.
- I cheerfully observe all rationing regulations and do not hoard.
- I budget my ration points carefully and don't waste food.
- I am planting a Victory garden.
- I work where I can do the most good for the war effort.
- I get to work on time and am never unavoidably absent.
- I do my best to stay healthy.
- I do my best to avoid accidents, especially if I work in a war plant.
- I watch what I say and spread no rumors.
- I conserve tires and gasoline.
- I share my car with others.
- I travel only when absolutely necessary.
- I carry my own bundles when shopping to save manpower, gas and tires.
- I contribute to the Red Cross and all War Relief funds.
- I save and turn in scrap metal, used cooking fats and other needed materials.
- I do Civilian Defense work.
- I work with the Red Cross or other volunteer groups.
- I am a regular blood donor.
- I volunteer for Nurse's Aide work.
- I do community social service work.
- I am prepared to quietly cooperate with the F.B.I. in apprehending suspicious persons.
- I contribute books to the men in the service.
- I write to friends and relatives in the service.
- I observe dimout and blackout regulations to the letter.

This list, of course, is not complete. Every man, woman and child will find many other ways to help. Check this list with your neighbors and find out what they are doing. But get going! Do all you can! And do it now! Consult your local Civilian Defense Council for further information.

Military Training For All Urged

Baltimore, March 9 (AP).—Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, said last night that the United States should adopt a sound system of universal military training for a large regular Army after the war.

"War today is a war of machines as well as of men," Patterson said in an address prepared for delivery to the Maryland Historical Society. "It takes constant effort . . . We still have not solved the problem of developing these instruments of war and training soldiers in the use of them in time of peace."

With Mary Harris

LEONARDO INTO METRONOME. Leonardo, notable violinist-maestro recently featured at New York's Waldorf-Astoria, will bring his orchestra to the Metronome Room on Friday night. The completely beauteous Nina Orla is the band's vocalist. Leonardo's dance music is the "society type," meaning that it's on the suave side, ranges through both North and South American rhythm. . . . Tomorrow and Thursday eve will be crammed with fond farewells to Alan Holmes and his band who've been collecting friends and fans by the hundreds these many months.

The Dickens Room and British Cozy Corner, intimate twin cocktail spots, will open at the Burlington Hotel on Friday. It'll be a gala party. Souvenirs for the girls, 'n everything.

THE GREETING BOYS. Mischa, major domo of the Troika, received a pretty recognition of his cordiality the other eve—the chic wife of a local theater manager saluted him with a great big kiss! . . . Willie Biron, who deftly ranges Paul Young's patrons around tables as though they were parts of a jig saw puzzle, used to be a newspaper circulation man. And is he efficient! . . . Another one who has all the answers is Carl Rinaldi of Mayfair who knows thousands of people by face and name, does his best to find tables for 'em all. . . . Martins, suave new greeter at the Dubonnet Room, is a Brazilian, came to this country with the Brazilian section of the New York World's Fair.

Taffy-haired Kathleen Quinn of El Patio recently turned down the offer of two screen tests. Not that Kathie doesn't want to go into the movies. But she's perfecting a new vocal style; wants to get it exactly right before she tests for the flickers.

FRIENDLY AND COMFORTING. Most soothing and significant names among the town's military entertainers are those of Leonard Friendly, organist of the Neptune Room, and Roy Comfort, maestro of the afternoon cocktail hour at the Lounge Riviera. Moreover, the handles are entirely appropriate. Organist Friendly is notorious for never turning down or skipping a request. And genial bandsman Comfort goes in for soft and comfortable melodies—notably those of Victor Herbert.

STARS ON THE SEPIA SIDE. The Jones Brothers, now cutting up with trumpet, vibes, piano and voice at the Brown Derby, are among the most terrific studies in sepia ever to come to Washington . . . Rhythm that'll wind you up like an alarm clock is being dispensed by the brownskin lads headed by Pianist Lee Williams in the Sazerac Room of the Old New Orleans. Les has the Fats Waller touch . . . And there's a little cream colored girl playing piano at the Gay '90's who's nothing less than haunting.

Mary La Marr, Washington girl now singing so cleverly in the Cosmos Room, never took a vocal lesson in her life except for a couple in the fundamentals of breathing and voice placement. She's acquired her present excellent technic almost entirely through observation and hard practice.

ODD CHORES. Passers-by were recently electrified to see violinist Durward Bowersox of Burt's Trans-Lux standing in front of the spot selling papers. He was helping out the crippled newsbow on the corner who had to go on an errand . . . Garden planning customers of the Hi Hat are often given sound advice by Manager Oscar Altman, who's quite an expert on posies, bulbs and rose bushes . . . The gifted Russian girls of the Balalaika floor show are also costume experts, design and make many of the exotic gowns they wear in the revue.

THE FADO, rerely seen Brazilian folk dance, is being pranced by the new Jeannette Hackett girls at the Casino Royal. They're also doing an "In the Pink" specialty and a "Patriots' Rally." Quaint Bonzo, the dog, and dancers Georges and Nanette are held over.

New high power bits at Del Rio are "Black Magic" and "It's Murder," as sung, respectively, by Billy Lowe and Caroll Paige of the Frankie Masters band.

OF DANCE RHYTHM. Ralph Hawkins' band at Crossroads is highly fancied by professional musicians as well as the general public. Maestro Ralph is an expert in the finer touches of syncopation . . . Bill Strickland's Band at the Lotus just goes rolling along season after season—for Bill has the "know how" of serving up dance music that pleases 97 per cent of the public . . . Young Bob Neal's band at the Louisiana is one to watch—they're always on their toes and their rhythms are smart and original . . . Myles Hallett's band is exactly what the doctor ordered for the sophisticates of Cafe Caprice—sparkling and unpredictable.

Pianist Ken Sterling of Kavakos Grill is also an artist. He executed the spirited naval murals that now line the walls, also the big American eagle over the bandstand.

3 Pose as OPA Men, Rob House

Gary, Ind., March 9 (AP).—Three robbers, posing as OPA inspectors investigating grocery, gasoline and fuel oil stocks, gained entrance to a private home here yesterday, bound two women with rags, and escaped with $20,000 in cash taken from a safe in the basement.

Police said the women were Mrs. Terzo Amidei, 25, and her Negro maid, Betty Doss, 45. The owner of the money was said to be Mrs. Amidei's father, George de Nicola, 61, operator of a tavern.

A Letter from Mother

"We heard from the Red Cross Field Director at your hospital that you were on the road to recovery.

"How thankful your father and I were to know that your life had been spared, and that you were already getting better. And how grateful we are to the Red Cross for all they have done to keep our boy safe and sound.

"Somehow, I never thought, when I was making Red Cross' surgical dressings, that perhaps some of them would bind the wounds of one dear to me.

"And when we gave our blood, Dad and I, we never imagined that our own boy would so soon need it, and thanks to the Red Cross, it would be there.

"I wish more parents and relatives and friends knew what the Red Cross is doing for their very own boys, from the moment they arrive at the training camp, right to the fighting front, and afterwards.

"I'm sure that if they did, they would go down deep into their pockets to help the Red Cross now, when it needs help as never before.

"You may be sure that Dad and I will do our part. This year we're giving double!"

Perhaps you, too, have someone in service whom you will want to help, intimately and personally, as the Red Cross does help him so well.

No matter where your soldier or sailor may be, the Red Cross is nearby, ready in sickness and in health, alert for mental as well as physical needs.

So give now to the Red Cross War Fund. Give generously, for the task is as huge as it is worthy. Give more this year—

British Hurl Blockbusters On Nurnberg

By the Associated Press

London, March 9.—Following up last night's scourge of Nurnberg, the Royal Air Force sent squadrons of Spitfires and speedy Mosquito bombers out to attack northern France this afternoon, and were on the prowl over Axis-held Europe again tonight.

Large forces of R. A. F. bombers started across the southwest coast shortly after dusk and the constant drone of engines was heard for 90 minutes as they headed southeast in nonstop formation.

The Spitfires made several sweeps and destroyed two enemy fighters at dusk, the Air Ministry announced the Mosquitos attacked a railway center near Le Mans. The communique said bursts on the main building were seen. One bomber failed to return.

Enemy bombers also continued their spasmodic activity tonight, appearing over coast towns in eastern and northeast England and dropping bombs in one rural area.

An authoritative announcement said one enemy raider was shot down into the sea tonight.

Alerts were sounded in Bern and Zurich shortly after 11 p. m. and Berlin, Munich, Leipzig, Konigsberg and Luxembourg radio stations left the air. Swiss alerts sometimes indicate that the R. A. F. is bombing southern Germany or Italy.

R. A. F. heavy bombers struck nearly 500 miles inside occupied Europe for the blockbuster and fire attack on Nurnberg last night. The Nazis conceded that "major damage was done, especially in residential quarters . . . some places of cultural and historic interest were destroyed . . . the populations suffered losses."

The German radio, elaborating on the results of last night's attack on Nurnberg, said bombs fell on a theater as well as the famous Germanic museum and the "Maut Hall," which was built in the fifteenth century.

While the battered seat of nazism was showered during the night with the heaviest explosives and tens of thousands of incendaries, other R. A. F. bombers rose to deal subsidiary blows to the war industries of western Germany in the resumption of R. A. F. night attacks after a two-day break attributed to foul weather.

Schrader Rites To Be Conducted At Cemetery Here

Funeral services for Frederick F. Schrader, 85, former Washington Post drama critic, who died Sunday in New York, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the grave in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Schrader was born in Hamburg, Germany, of American parents. He became managing editor of the Denver (Colo) Republican and the St. Joseph (Mo.) Herald. He served as political writer for The Post from 1894 to 1896 and drama editor from 1901 to 1906. During his stay in Washington he also was correspondent for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Kansas City Journal.

Mr. Schrader was well known on Broadway as the author of several hits.

Surviving is his wife, Mrs. Marie B. Schrader.

Rites Tomorrow In Baltimore for Mrs. Dorsey, 84

Funeral services for Mrs. Margaret Dorsey, 84, mother of Mrs. Margaret G. Singerhoff, 202 Webster Street Northwest, will be held in Baltimore tomorrow. She died at her home in the Maryland city Monday.

Widow of Patrick Dorsey, a contractor who built the foundation for Union Station here, Mrs. Dorsey had been in ill health for more than a year. Born in England, she came to this country as a young woman and was the mother of 11 children.

Besides Mrs. Singerhoff, she is survived by four other daughters, Mrs. Grace Vogelsand and Mrs. Anna George of Baltimore; Mrs. Marie Kellum of Newport News, Va., and Mrs. Estelle Crisp of Philadelphia.

Last Rites Set Tomorrow for C. E. Beckett

Funeral services for C. Edward Beckett, 74, physical director of the central Young Men's Christian Association from 1900 to 1931, will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at Hines funeral home. Interment will be in Baltimore, Md., where Mr. Beckett was born. He died Monday afternoon at his home, 1826 Kenyon Street Northwest, after a two-month illness.

Educated at the University of Baltimore School of Medicine and George Washington University, Mr. Beckett was an outstanding physical educator in different parts of the country before he came here in April, 1900, to join the local "Y" staff. Outstanding are his contributions to basketball and handball. Some 50 years ago he devised the so-called "bottomless" basket, replacing the former peach basket tacked on the wall.

In 1918, he went over to France and served as director of the Brest division of the "Y" for six months. After his return, Mr. Beckett served on the national Y. M. C. A. handball committee. He also was a member of the Fellows of Physical Education, the international joint basketball rules committee and chairman of the International Physical Directors Society.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helen E. Beckett; a daughter, Mrs. Edmund C. Wallace, and a grandson, Hugh Wallace, who was a star on the Central High School football team last year.

Slaughter Of Cows

Dairy farmers in the vicinity of Washington and elsewhere are known to face numerous difficulties. The shortage of manpower for some of them has become acute. Farm machinery is difficult to get, and transportation threatens to become a serious problem as tires wear thinner. There seems to be absolutely no excuse, however, for the slaughter of healthy dairy cows of milk-producing ages. If farmers are resorting to that practice, as is reported by Representative Sasscer and various others, they are inexcusably flouting the interests of their country in wartime.

There is no occasion for alarm in the fact that some dairy cows in the Washington milkshed are being sold for slaughter. That is an entirely normal practice. Milk cows continue to be good producers on the average for about six years. When their production begins to slump because of age, they are customarily sold for conversion into beef. This practice would account for a turnover of about 16 per cent in dairy herds each year. In other words, we have nearly 7000 cows going to slaughterhouses from the Washington milkshed every 12 months when no labor shortages or other difficulties exist. If it is these over-age cows to which the dairymen and their friends are referring, the loss need occasion no alarm.

But if the dairymen are selling good milk producers for conversion into beef, they are open to the sharpest censure. The Farm Security Administration is making a policy of buying up all cows offered for sale in this and other areas throughout the country. At present the demand for milk cows in this area exceeds the supply. So any cows that a farmer cannot take care of can be retained in this milkshed by a shift in ownership.

In the circumstances the stories going the rounds about the slaughter of cows in this area have the smell of propaganda for an increase in the price of milk. But instead of convincing the public that higher milk prices are inevitable, the needless slaughter of cows that are still good producers is more likely to produce a wave of wrath against those responsible. For the slaughter of cows that can easily be saved to produce food is a crime against the national interest.

Fire Power

The mounting tank losses that the Axis is sustaining in Tunisia confirms the assurances that at least the fire power of the Allies is not deficient. Such a charge, it will be recalled, came out of Tunisia after the early reverses. It was all of a piece with the usual excuses which are put forward to explain defeats. In point of fact, our weapons are unexcelled, and the monster Axis tank, the Mark VI, presents no problem to our ordnance. This is shown by the latest reports that the greatest casualties in the repulse of Rommel's offensive against the British Eighth Army are these very same tanks. It is estimated that of the 45 tanks that the Axis has lost since February 26 a number are Mark VIs.

Yet, to judge from some recent comments by military writers, the German Mark VI is unbeatable. One reason may be that it is equipped with the 88-mm. gun which caused such havoc among Gen. Neil M. Ritchie's forces in Libya a year ago. But this gun no longer affords any terrors for either the British Eighth Army or the Anglo-American First Army. In both armies there are four American weapons which can outmaneuver, outshoot, and destroy the Mark VI. One is the self-propelled 105-mm. howitzer, the major weapon which caused the rout of Marshal Rommel at El Alamein. It is larger than the 88-mm., has a much heavier shell, a much greater bursting charge, and has a longer effective range against tanks. This gun has broken Rommel's attacks on Montgomery's new positions in front of the Mareth line. A second weapon now at the Allies' disposal is our medium General Sherman tank, the M-IV, which mounts the high velocity 77-mm. guns, and which has been praised fulsomely by the British as the best tank in the world. Another weapon is the heretofore secret M-10 tank destroyer, with a 3-inch high-velocity gun mounted with an open turret, one shell from which could destroy the Nazi Mark VI at long range. A fourth is the 90-mm. gun. Why this weapon was not brought into action to repel Rommel's successful thrust against the Anglo-American First Army a month ago has not been explained. Suffice it to say that this weapon is in Tunisia in quantity.

Victory will be won by fire power, or a combination of T. N. T. and steel, and all calculations must be based upon that fact. A heavy tank such as the Germans are using was rejected by our Army for two good and sufficient reasons. First, it did not pack enough fire power to warrant all the machinery, and, secondly, it is slow and therefore lacks maneuverability. It would seem from the latest dispatches that the adverse decision of our Army has been justified, though the justification would not carry weight but for the fact that our artillery far more than counterbalances the Mark VI.

Tempest In A Teapot

Ambassador Standley's charge that the Soviet authorities are withholding from the Russian people the full facts about the volume and character of American aid should help clear the Russian-American air. On the high level of major policies, no basic grievances mar the even tenor of our relations with the Soviet Union. There has certainly been no complaint on our part regarding the contributions made by the Red army and the Russian people to the common effort. These have been magnificent, and we have said so time and time again. Clearly the Russian leaders have been disappointed by the immediate effects of the North African occupation by our and British troops, yet they recognize that this military action did ease German pressure on the Red army and will, in due course, lead to the establishment of a second land front in Europe.

By no means the same harmony has prevailed on the lower level of day-to-day relations. Our military leaders have complained of Russia's failure to permit them to keep observers on the fighting fronts. Recently, it is true, Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley was given permission to make such a survey in the Stalingrad area and the Caucasus. But this was a departure from the rule, rather than a change of policy. Then, there is no doubt that Premier Stalin's statement in his recent order of the day to the effect that the Red army was alone bearing the whole weight of the war was irritating to Washington and London. Both capitals have long felt that greater Russian recognition should be given to the aid we have sent into the Soviet Union, sometimes in the face of fierce odds.

However, it is not entirely true to say that even before the Moscow broadcasts of the Stettinius report on lend-lease last night, the Russian people had been kept in complete ignorance of our lend-lease aid. Millions of Russians have seen our planes and tanks and jeeps with their own eyes. Then the Soviet newspapers, in printing the speeches of Premier Churchill and President Roosevelt, have also printed their remarks about our aid to Russia. Pravda, moreover, on January 23 published complete figures of war supplies received from Russia's allies, "giving the public for the first time," according to cabled accounts published here at the time, "the details of their great bulk." And we have the testimony of Henry Cassidy, head of the Associated Press Bureau in Moscow, and now in this country, that the people of Soviet Russia not only know of but also appreciate the supplies which have been sent to them under lend-lease.

The whole episode would seem to fall into the category of a tempest in a teapot. After all, it is not the amount of publicity which is given to lend-lease aid in the Russian press, nor even whether the Russians are duly grateful for the aid they have received from us, that counts. The greatest possible mistake we could make is to assume that our shipments to Russia or to any other ally are an act of charity on our part. Those shipments are a manifestation of cold-blooded self-interest which yield dividends even if they don't always yield official amenities. To the extent that our aid to Russia enables that country to do greater damage to our common foe, we are helping ourselves. If we don't remember that, and get superheated by way of backing up Admiral Standley's irritation, then we should be completely lacking in a sense of proportion.

Tojo's Gloom

It was a very chastened Hideki Tojo who came to the microphone the other day to broadcast to the Japanese people a survey of the military situation. Time was when he boasted loud and long of the brilliant accomplishments of the Mikado's soldiers, sailors and fliers. He had little reason to do so this time. In the Battle of the Bismarck Sea an entire Japanese convoy and practically all of its supporting air force had been wiped out by bombers and fighters of the United States Army Air Force. And this battle was, as Premier Tojo no doubt realizes, only a foretaste of what is in store for Japan in the months ahead.

We have heard much, during recent weeks, of the decline in the Luftwaffe. What is even more striking, however, is the decline in the Japanese air force. In the early days of the Pacific War it gave an extremely good account of itself. The fliers seemed well-trained; the planes, particularly the much-touted Zero, effective; the tactical skill of the Japanese air force first rate. From having underrated the Japanese in the air the tendency became fairly widespread to overrate them. But it took time to bring that out. Now, however, it is clear that Japan has shot her bolt so far as air power is concerned. General Chennault is only one of a number of observers on the spot who are convinced that the caliber of Japanese fliers is deteriorating. At the same time Japan's production capacity in the field of aircraft does not appear to be great enough to provide our enemies with that vast numerical superiority in the Pacific without which they cannot regain their erstwhile supremacy in the air. And what is true of airplane construction is probably equally true of shipbuilding, a field in which Japan's needs mount rapidly as a result of the increasingly effective work being done by our submarines.

It would be folly, of course, to assume that Japan is finished. The fact is that she still has a considerable punch left while we, given our other commitments, cannot send into the Pacific the force necessary to knock out the Nipponese. Nonetheless we have reason to be encouraged by the outlook. For while Japan's curve of power is declining, ours is definitely on the rise.

World War III

Two notable Americans spoke to the American people on Monday about World War III. The specter they invoked was the nemesis of a refusal to profit by the lessons of two world wars. Both speakers arrived at the same conclusion: we must have world organization or perish. But they came to that conclusion by different routes. While Vice President Wallace, who spoke to the Conference on Christian Bases of World Order, trod the path of Christian unity, the Minnesotan dwelt upon the annihilation of space which has been accomplished in this air age.

Both arguments reinforce one another. On the physical plane the facts make what Governor Stassen called "a higher level of government" inescapable. The world is now so close-knit that from our Middle West there is not one important city in the entire world that cannot be reached within 48 hours. That solitary fact means that isolation has gone forever. We have become, whether we like it or not, as crowded together as Juvenal's Rome. In no area, according to the Governor, who comes from the heart of the isolationist belt, is this more recognized than in the Middle West. This indeed, was his message. He went on to show that the Middle Westerners, once they have learned a lesson, have the common sense to apply it. Isolation is the twin sister of nationalism. According to Governor Stassen, the transformation in the planet's physical system has brought about a demand in the Middle West that we live together as what Mr. Wallace called a "neighborhood."

That, of course, has always been the Christian ethic, even before the annihilation of distance. But down the years the doctrine of the brotherhood of man became submerged by the nationalist myth which limited brotherhood to frontiers. Mr. Wallace traced the gradual growth of nationalism as an anti-Christian doctrine under the impetus of German and Japanese philosophy. In the countries of our enemies nationalism in its violent forms marched straight to the god-state. The Vice President foresaw World War III unless, in G. K. Chesterton's words, we again made God our government. Under such an ethic there would be no need to argue that the next peace must provide for a "higher level of government" on a world plane.

Both speakers have been called quixotic for their views on world organization. The Vice President has been accused of arguing for the provision of a quart of milk a day for every man, woman, and child. The Minnesotan has been criticized for sponsoring a world government over all governments. Such an indictment could not be leveled against them for their Monday addresses. Neither was any more visionary than the platform of the Republican leaders in the last war who pleaded for a League to Enforce Peace. If we had had such a league in place of the League of Nations which was set up in Geneva, we should have avoided the faults of that organization which Governor Stassen mentioned. The League to Enforce Peace which Taft, Root, and Lowell urged would have had teeth in it. So would the Stassen organization. It would aid the war effort as well as lay the foundation of a just and durable peace if Congress by joint resolution were to give its blessing to an effort to explore a new world polity. That is the first step in laying the ghost of World War III.

BURYING A STILL-BORN CHILD

It was May; the day was sunny; song sparrows were full-throated with song in the willows; along the creek the sound of running water like quiet laughter floated over the cemetery;
the sky was clear blue; the fresh elm leaves spreading like flowers made fragrant the air.

The man with head uncovered watched the tiny casket
sink in the fresh-cut earth. So many years the two of them had wanted and looked for a child, and now out of the years' hope and waiting out of the care and pain of childbirth, this:
the small body perfectly formed, but lacking
the final touch of life, dead like their hopes.

The child was dead, but the world sang with joy
over its body; the laughing water and fragrant elms filled all the air about with loveliness.

Numb as with cold, the man covered his head;
he went home to his wife lying in the sickbed
the house was silent about them.

FRED LAPE

Drafting Labor

By Mark Sullivan

By Indirect Pressure

IN WASHINGTON, action to avert a serious farm and food condition is moving now with reasonable speed. This is true both in Congress and on the part of Administration agencies. That a bleak prospect exists is at last realized. The present tendency is toward action that will be drastic in proportion to the need.

Proposed ways to relieve the shortage of farm labor fall into groups. One group has to do with soldiers and the draft. This includes:

Send soldiers into the fields to plant and harvest. This is mainly out. It appealed to President Roosevelt, but the Army heads and others saw objections to it. In any event, it would have been practicable only in sections close to Army camps.

RELEASE farmers now in the Army to go back to the farms. This would involve a time-consuming job of combing the Army to find men with farm training, and would break up Army units in a way that would delay training. As Secretary of War Stimson explained in his carefully prepared radio address, the Army is an immense and intricate organization, its parts minutely interrelated. To take out men here and there, after training is under way, would postpone military operations.

Defer all farmers subject to the draft. This is the purpose of the bill sponsored by Senator Bankhead. Until recently, this bill was not expected to be enacted. Even though a majority of the Senate believed in it, there was a disposition to take the judgment of Army heads, who opposed it. Probably the Army would have done better to accept this idea. The present prospect is that draft deferment for farmers will be enacted in some form. It has one appealing quality. Farmers and farmers' sons, who do not like to ask deferment, would now have it imposed on them by law and be free from either self-reproach or reproach by others.

But all the farm relief measures associated with the draft would be inadequate, even if all were adopted. The number of men saved for the farms would be relatively small. It is not the draft that has taken most of the men from farms, it is the high wages paid workers in industry. This latter is the condition that must be overcome, if a farm and food crisis is to be averted.

Proposals to get workers in industry back to the farms fall into two groups—by voluntary action or by governmental requirement. In the category of voluntary action was a proposal by Economic Director Byrnes. He said last month that "we should urge these men to return to the farms, where they are needed, even if the compensation is less." That suggestion was made on the same day the administration increased the wages of workers in industry—by directing that the standard workweek be raised from 40 hours to 48 and that time and a half wage-rates be paid for the added 8 hours. Mr. Byrnes' suggestion did not take root.

Another proposal by the Administration for voluntary action remains a slender and not very promising plan—the proposal of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard that 3,500,000 persons be recruited in cities and towns to work on farms. It did not appeal strongly to farmers, who know that many kinds of farm work can be done satisfactorily only by workers who remain on the farm the year round, or at least throughout the whole season. Especially is this true of dairying, in which the danger of food shortage is greatest. Besides, what wages would be paid the volunteer workers? Perhaps some would not expect high rates. If to any great extent, volunteer workers were paid the same wages as in industry, farming would become an expensive operation. An inevitable result would be an increase in the cost of raising crops, hence the cost of living. This the Administration wishes to avert.

AN ADMINISTRATION proposal was that farmers be compensated for increased costs by a subsidy—Congress was asked to appropriate $100,000,000. But farm leaders oppose the subsidy idea because they feel it would be accompanied by onerous regulations, increasing the control of Government over farmers.

On the whole, conditions, as respects farm labor and all labor, move toward governmental requirement, such as contemplated by the Wadsworth-Austin bill for "a system of civilian selective war service." By this, men would be required to work where they are most needed, consistent with their experience and adaptability. While the requirement would be compulsory, it would not in operation involve a great quantity of direct compulsion. The bill would work mainly by indirect pressure — preventing men from quitting one job for another. Workers on farms would be required to remain there—the drain toward city industry would at least be arrested, even though belatedly. Perhaps some farm workers now in industry would be put under pressure to go back to the farms.

Airplanes Vs. Ships

By Paul Schubert

The New Sea Power

THE VICTORY of our aircraft in smashing a convoy of Japanese reinforcements bound for Lae and Salamaua a few days ago is another bright chapter of the Pacific war. With trivial losses to ourselves, American planes demolished 22 enemy transports and men-of-war, shot down 102 enemy aircraft. Enemy loss of life was estimated at 15,000. A plan important to the enemy's strategy was stopped short—the unfolding history of this contest in Pacific power will probably now be very different than if the Battle of the Bismarck Sea had ended less successfully.

One-sidedness of this nature is often a characteristic of sea battles—the victor almost untouched, the loser annihilated. The combatant with the upper hand starts doing damage, and from the moment his opponent loses the first ship, the curve of enemy resistance sinks faster and faster, until at the end the odds become overwhelming. In the words of the MacArthur communique:

"ENEMY air coverage became weaker and weaker; his forces were scattered and dispersed; and finally his remnants, isolated and bewildered, were gradually annihilated by our successive air formations as we sent them into combat."

For each losing ship—a trip to the bottom. Finis.

In this action we used air power as the sole visible striking force—airplanes operated from a land base or bases. Our use of air power was offensive. We sent airplanes out over the sea to control a sea movement which the enemy wished to make. Our airplanes had to do two jobs: (1) Drive enemy airplanes from the skies in the battle area, and (2) sink the enemy's ships or turn them back from their destination.

The enemy used air power too, defensively, in the effort to "cover" his ship movement. Judging by the total of over 70 enemy aircraft known to have been engaged, the quantity of enemy air power being used was not small. But the enemy's air power was defeated in the sky combat wtih a decisiveness as striking as that shown against the enemy's ships.

This action is bound to revive the assertion that "the airplane now commands the seas."

If the Battle of the Bismarck Sea had taken place as an isolated incident, it might, in fact, become one of those episodes that alter the course of armaments, setting "styles" in weapons that endure for decades. Military men of all land, sea and air services worship at the altar of success. Weapons that win decisive, one-sided battles are the the weapons that every service wants.

But this battle is only one of many actions in the long and stubborn Pacific war. It adds new data with which to form judgments as to the best way to control the seas and the air above the seas. It is fortunately not the only information we have on that subject so vitally important to America's future.

Within two or three months there have been occasions, out in the Far East, when the efforts of aircraft to interfere with ship movements have been repulsed with equal decisiveness—Japanese aircraft trying to stop American ships.

On many other occasions battles have been fought with both sides using both ships and aircraft . . . sometimes the tide of battle has gone one way, sometimes another.

Gradually, out of the mass of information being collected, we arrive at one fundamental law: "As of this year, 1943, there is no pat formula for control of the seas." It is folly to say that the airplane is master of the seas—equal folly to make the generalization that the ship is master of the seas."

Modern sea power is not a contest between ships and airplanes. The struggle between ourselves and the Japanese is not a contest between ships and airplanes.

THE Australian-American allies are fighting the Japanese for control of certain bodies of water—for the ability to move freight in ships through those bodies of water and freight in aircraft over those bodies of water.

Both of us long since found it necessary to use a combination of ships and aircraft, if we were to have any chance of winning these fights.

MacArthur's aircraft, winning the Battle of the Bismarck Sea, were a component of the new kind of sea power—the kind which has made old-fashioned ideas of sea warfare as dead as the dodo. But to deliver this blow, MacArthur's aircraft were supported by invisible ships—the ships which moved the fuel and supplies that made this attack possible, and which were guarded by other ships and other aircraft. Modern sea warfare is a ship-plane team job. We have a good team—that's why we win battles.

Robert Taylor

Mr. Drew Pearson told a story in yesterday's issue of The Washington Post about a conversation I am supposed to have had with Mr. Gregory Ratoff and Mr. Elmer Davis regarding a deferment for movie actor Robert Taylor.

As I never talked with either Gregory Ratoff or Elmer Davis regarding Robert Taylor, I shall be obliged if you publish a proper denial. MAXIM LITVINOFF.

Absenteeism

Why all this clamor about absenteeism in war plants?

In today's Post, Mr. Robert De Vore's article on this subject, largely devoted to quoting high officials of the armed services to the effect that thousands of planes could have been built by the absentees, contains this succinct and highly illuminating paragraph:

"In this graphic interpretation of figures on absenteeism in war plants given the committee by Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, it was made clear that materials shortages, not worker layoffs, set the limit on 1942 aircraft production. The aircraft industry last year turned out every airplane possible with materials available, it was explained."

The use of the phrases "it was made clear" and "it was explained" obviously avoids acknowledging the source of these statements. However, if taken at face value, this one paragraph would appear to knock all arguments for punishment of absenteeism into a cocked hat. C. K.

Ration Liquor

I second the motion of Edward Ferris, whose article appeared in your column February 24, to establish a midnight curfew for night clubs, taverns, etc. To permit these places, especially the small taverns, to operate after midnight, is to encourage waste of time, money and lives. The revenue lost by the Government in cutting down these places would flow to it from other channels not so degrading. We would have fewer alcoholics and more manpower for necessary war activities. If those wishing to do nothing but drink would be taken in charge under military supervision and put on work that is essential. We are rationed on necessary food, why not a drastic ration on liquor? B. G. C.
Washington, Feb. 24.

Political Objection?

On February 19 I sent the following telegram to the Treasury Department and Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee: "Inasmuch as 1942 tax is to be paid March 15, I suggest pay as you go plan be effective March 16, but tax thereafter to be on 1943 rates with 1942 tax in every case as minimum. This may also be expressed as paying 1942 or 1943 tax whichever is greater. This is simple, easy to understand, equitable, eliminates windfalls, closes 1943 without hangovers and maintains level of Treasury income."

It should be noted particularly that this proposal for paying the 1942 or 1943 tax whichever is greater meets the objections of the Treasury Department to windfalls to taxpayers who had large incomes in 1942 and will have smaller incomes in 1943. However, it appears that the Treasury is continuing its objections. The inevitable conclusion is that the Treasury and others who still object are doing so for other reasons. It is true that paying in 1943 on 1943 incomes will collect taxes from many people who are now throwing their money away and on the present system would have no money to pay their 1943 taxes in 1944. The objections of the Treasury appear then to be political and to be based on the hope of buying votes for the Roosevelt Administration by avoiding all collection of 1943 taxes from boom wartime wage earners.

There can be no doubt that the Treasury understands that the "pay as you go" plan merely substitutes the 1943 tax for 1942 without possible loss to the Government except by "windfalls" and my proposal takes care of that. There is no further sound basis for objection. W. E. JOHNSTON.

A Reception

Much is being said and written about the Battle of the Bismarck Sea, but when I read the story it did not appeal to me as being a battle. Rather, as I saw it, Gen. Douglas MacArthur having been informed that the Japs were planning a social call on New Guinea, and being the obliging gentleman he is, decided that he and his men would form a reception committee so as to make the Japs feel that their presence had not been overlooked. The reception, as staged, might not have been according to Emily Post, but it was a reception nevertheless, and it seems a well-known fact that it was a warm reception. C. B. R.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Fourth Term

("Chairman Walker of the Democratic National Committee said the national committeemen calling on Mr. Roosevelt urged that he be a candidate for a fourth term they got no response. 'I doubt if the President heard it,' he said."—News item.)

Mr. Walker (as he enters with the national committeemen)—Mr. President, you know all these boys.

Mr. Roosevelt (completely surprised and puzzled)—Why, no; I don't quite place them.

Mr. Walker—They're all members of the National Democratic Committee.

Mr. Roosevelt—Now what on earth can they be doing here?

Mr. Walker—We thought we'd like to drop in for a little chat.

Mr. Roosevelt—About what?

Mr. Walker—Well, about——

Mr. Roosevelt (interrupting)—Let me guess. Is it about the weather?

Mr. Walker—In a way, yes, but not exactly.

Mr. Roosevelt—Is it about birds and flowers?

Mr. Walker—You'll never guess, Frank.

A committeeman—Aw, give him a chance.

Mr. Walker—One more guess, Frank.

Mr. Roosevelt—Am I warm?

Mr. Walker—Not very.

Mr. Roosevelt—Couldn't you give me a little hint?

Mr. Walker—Very well, and listen carefully. Now Franklin, you're beginning your eleventh year as President——

Mr. Roosevelt—That's so, isn't it? How time flies!

Mr. Walker—Your third term is rolling along, you know.

Mr. Roosevelt—Yes, I suppose it is. But I hadn't thought of it in that light.

Mr. Walker—Now can you guess what we want to talk about?

Mr. Roosevelt—Could it be about my ship models?

Mr. Walker—Just concentrate, Franklin. This is your eleventh year . . . it's 1943 . . . now what years comes after 1943?

Mr. Roosevelt—Don't prompt me . . . 1944, doesn't it?

Mr. Walker (pleased)—Correct.

Several committeemen—Give him the $64 question.

Mr. Walker—And what happens in 1944? Don't hurry. Take your time. It begins with "E."

Mr. Roosevelt—Electricity . . . eels . . . emu . . . epicac . . . elephant?

Mr. Walker—It has to do with November . . . people at the polls . . . does that help you?

Mr. Roosevelt—Could it be "elections?"

(The committeemen stamp their feet at the progress.)

Mr. Walker—Correct. And now do you want to go for double or nothing?

Mr. Roosevelt—Yes, I think so.

Mr. Walker—The question is sent by practically the whole darned country . . . Would you run for a fourth term?

Mr. Roosevelt—That's a nice tie you're wearing, Frank.

Mr. Walker—Answer the question, please? Would you take another term?

Mr. Roosevelt—It certainly is a late spring. I haven't seen a robin anywhere.

Mr. Walker (to the disgruntled committeemen)—Well, let's go. I don't think he hears us.

(They go.)

"The administration of justice must come second to the policy of the state in Nazi rule."—Berlin statement.

Or even a bad third.

It Makes a Difference

"Bombing is barbaric!"
Hear the Nazis cry
Rise from German cities
Blasted from the sky.
"Bombing open cities
Is a crime severe!" . . .
Rotterdam in rubble,
Do you seem to hear?
"Blasting crowded places
Is an ugly sin" . . .
Warsaw in your ashes,
Does it make you grin?
"Sky attacks are savage, Brutal, dirty, rough!" . . .
Coventry and Plymouth
Do you hear this stuff?
"Razing mighty cities
Is a beastly thing" . . .
London in your anguish
Hear the tune they sing!
Berlin . . . Munich . . . Essen!
Won't the foemen learn
Are another matter
When the war tides turn?

King George is working in a war plant in overalls several hours every evening. It is a fine gesture but we think it must slow down the work terrifically. Can you imagine working in a war shop and knowing that a King is at the next bench? Even a duke would throw you off your stride.

It is a safe bet that the whole plant is agog when it comes time for the King to show up, that all the workers stop to look at their watches to see if he is on time or late again . . . to note how much work he does . . . to see whether he quits a minute ahead of time . . . etc. It must upset the workers almost as much as it would upset the King if several hundred workmen came to Buckingham Palace two hours a day to aid him.

Plot For Victory

Since everyone is urged to convert their backyard into a victory garden, Uncle Sam could set a fine example by converting his own "backyard" as such. I mean the "backyard" to the Capitol Building—that nonproductive space between the Capitol and the Monument. If we're going "all out," let's go "all out."

After victory it could easily be converted to its original beauty.

Wallace Speaks Out

By Ernest Lindley

Russia And The Western Allies

OTHERS, including Wendell Willkie, had said previously what Vice President Wallace said Monday about future relations between the Soviet Union and the Western democracies. They must collaborate or another world war will become only too probable. Until now, the tendency in some official quarters has been to discourage open and frank discussion of this central problem, lest the result be to inspire greater mistrust and fear, and so weaken the grand alliance. The Axis radio exploits to the utmost every sign or admission that Russia and the Western Allies do not entirely trust each other. It probably will twist the Vice President's speech into a prediction of war between the United States and Russia within 10 years. For internal political reasons, also, some officials have hesitated to talk candidly about our relations with Russia, now and in the future.

LINDLEY

The Vice President has taken off the lid. He was not quite as blunt as Stalin sometimes is, but he did not pretend that our present understandings and relationships with Russia form a solid base for confidence as to fruitful collaboration in the future.

We are fighting the war with Britain on a basis of mutual confidence. Our affairs have become interlocked at many points with those of Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other parts of the British Empire. With Britain and the empire we not only have a solid structure of common understanding but it already contains a great deal of machinery for day-by-day collaboration. The machinery could be dismantled and the structure weakened after the war by short-sighted policies in London, Washington and the Dominions. But both the structure and the machinery inside it will already exist, and with sound management on all sides it should be possible to keep them in repair and expand them as conditions warrant.

OUR RELATIONS with Russia are still those between fortuitous Allies, of dissimilar languages, institutions and traditions. Russia's relations with all her Allies are handicapped further by the suspicions and fears which grew out of the Communist revolution, and the reaction of most of the rest of the world to it, and by the possibility of a revival of Russian imperialism of the traditional sort.

Mr. Wallace has underlined the first essentials of enduring collaboration between Russia and the principal Western Allies. Russia must not revert to its efforts to foment world revolution. The Western powers must not foment or encourage anti-Russian activities in Germany and other nations. This means, of course, that Russia must not arouse the fears of her neighbors and of more distant powers by imperialistic practices.

AS THE Vice President also rightly emphasizes, the principal western democracies need have no fear of old-line communism or any other revolutionary doctrine, including fascism, if they provide full employment and a rising standard of living.

If these first principles of policy are accepted by Britain, Russia and the United States, there is no reason why a foundation of mutual trust cannot be laid and the machinery for enduring collaboration contrived. Many problems will have to be worked out. Some may be difficult, but no more so than some of the collisions of interest between Britain and the United States which will be amicably adjusted unless, after the war, men completely lacking in common sense come into power in London or Washington. But there are no fundamental conflicts in interest between Russia as a nation and the United States, unless one or the other embarks on a policy of world-wide imperialism or domination menacing to the security of the other. As things stand now, the Russians have no territory or spheres of influence which we want, and we have none which, so far as we know, they want. The geographical claims made by the Russians raise difficult questions—and incidentally have created more mistrust of them than Nazi propaganda has been able to arouse since the war began—but so far they are limited and specific claims, which are not without historical and other justification.

Insofar as these justifications are military, their weight will depend upon the other military and political arrangements made by the victorious Allies, especially the Big Three who will have most of the military power in the years immediately following the defeat of Germany and Japan.

The Vice President has posed the alternatives and given his own answer—the only answer which holds the hope of achieving an enduring peace.

Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 9.—Because of confusion regarding the income tax, and lack of information on the part of taxpayers, the Treasury may be deprived of many millions of dollars of tax revenue this March 15.

On the basis of the latest facts gathered by interviewers for the Institute in all areas of the country, Secretary Morgenthau may discover that many people who were supposed to file tax returns will not have done so, unless a heroic last-minute effort is made to inform the public as to the requirements of the present tax law.

If this is not done, the Treasury not only stands to lose revenue, but many taxpayers may find themselves facing possible jail sentences for failure to comply with the law.

Disturbing Situation

Interviewers questioned married men throughout the Nation as to the amount a married person has to earn before it becomes necessary to file a tax return. When men who themselves are earning more than $1200 were asked this question, one-third either had no idea what the legal requirement is, or did not know that it affects married people with incomes as law as $1200.

Obviously a good many people will discover, between the time they were interviewed and the time the tax is due, just who must file a return. But it is also obvious that, with so large a number ignorant of the true requirements, many will not discover in time that they must file unless a great educational campaign is put on between now and March 15.

In the case of single persons, the situation is even more disturbing. Even among those earning more than $500 a year, only slightly more than one-half know that single people with incomes as low as $500 must file a return.

These facts do not necessarily mean that one-third of all married men or one-half of all single persons who should file returns will not do so. But there is clear indication that a considerable number will likely fail to file a return unless newspapers and radio stations are used in a great tax campaign.

Two Questions Asked

Field reporters for the Institute talked with single persons and married men throughout the 48 States during the past week on various aspects of the income tax issue.

Single persons making more than $500 a year were asked:

"Do you happen to know how much money a single person had to make last year before he has to file an income tax report this March 15?"

The results are:

How single persons earning more than $500 a year answered: 54 per cent gave correct figure ($500; 31 per cent named a higher figure; $15 per cent said they did not know.

Married men earning more than $1200 a year were asked a similar question dealing wtih tax regulations for married persons, as follows:

"Do you happen to know how much money a married person had to make last year before he has to file an income tax report this March 15?"

The results are:

How married men earning more than $1200 a year answered:

67 per cent gave correct figure $1200); 21 per cent named a higher figure; 12 per cent said they did not know.

Puerto Rico Problem

President Advocates Home Rule

By David Fernsler
Associated Press Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday advocated home rule for Puerto Rico, where two million United States citizens are crowded on a small Caribbean island which has been converted into an Atlantic Gibraltar for defnse of the Panama Canal.

The President asked Congress to consider as soon as possible an amendment to the organic law of Puerto Rico to permit the people there to elect their own Governor—the post now held by Rexford Guy Tugwell, one of the original 10 New Dealers.

Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation came on the heels of reports of hunger and want in the tropic isle which has been under the American flag 45 years. Members of a special Senate committee, returning from the island recently, told of hardships resulting from overpopulation and unemployment, sharpened by the loss of shipping and insular trade.

The President, noting that "it has long been the policy of the Government of the United States progressively to reinforce the machinery of self-government in its territory and island possessions," also recommended that Congress redefine the functions and powers of the Federal Government and the government of Puerto Rico, respectively.

Tugwell Under Attack

Tugwell has been under attack on charges he was attempting to set up a socialistic state in parceling out sugar estates for the benefit of slum dwellers and under privileged and in putting the insular government into business of one kind or another. The Interior Department has general supervision over Puerto Rican affairs, and Secretary Ickes has vigorously defended Tugwell, emphasizing there had been no charges of misconduct in office, inefficiency or incompetence but only "violent criticism" of the Governor for administering laws passed by the Insular Legislature.

The President's message prompted Chairman Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland, of the Senate Territories Committee, coauthor of the law freeing the Philippines, to suggest that Congress pave the way for Puerto Rican independence with the United States retaining military bases on the island.

"I would like to see the Puerto Ricans given their own freedom to decide their own destiny," Tydings said.

The Senator, in effect, indorsed a unanimous request of the Puerto Rican Legislature which last month petitioned Congress to end the island's colonial regime and permit its people to select their own form of government by popular vote—after the war if not immediately feasible.

Universal Suffrage

Chairman Bell (Democrat) of Missouri of the House Insular Affairs Committee declined comment on the grounds he is under instructions of the committee to ask the House to authorize an investigation of Puerto Rican affairs before action is taken on any insular legislation.

First intimations of administration desires to extend greater home rule to the island came last summer. It was revealed then that Governor Tugwell had submitted the proposal to Secretary Ickes, who thought well of it and took it to the White House. The Governor advocated greater autonomy for the island in his message to the current Legislature, adding that he did not know "whether it is to be within or without the sisterhood of States."

Puerto Rico has universal suffrage and an elective Legislature which considers and enacts measures governing its internal affairs, but acts of the insular lawmakers are subject to veto by the Governor. Puerto Rican Governors have been appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the United States Senate and have held office at his pleasure.

'Ain't Seen Such Shootin' Since I Was Foot High'

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

At a United States Bomb Station Somewhere in England, March 9.—"I tell you I ain't seen so much shootin' since I was a foot high."

It's Bombardier Lieut. Norman B. Bennett, jr., long-jawed and dour-faced but droll son of Winston-Salem, N. C., telling about yesterday's raid on Rennes, France, when Flying Fortresses and Spitfires tangled with a big swarm of Reichsmarshal Goering's crack fighters.

"We had to fight every inch of the way into that target. I was shootin' and shootin' and then shootin' some more. Those hot shells were pourin' out of that gun on my neck worse than any sunburn I ever had.

"Why, man, we were workin' that gun so, the feeder busted after 300 rounds and old Webb (Navigator Lieut. Clarence Webb of San Angelo, Tex., who was with Bennett in the nose of the Fortress flown by Capt. J. C. Price of Estes Park, Colo.) was feedin' 'em by hand.

"There are 265 rounds in a box and we used up all our four boxes and the air still was full of fighters. I said 'Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition,' but there wasn't any ammunition to pass. Old Webb stuck an oxygen bottle under his arm and started back toward the tail. When we left there were 52 rounds and 765 planes and a thousand fighters up there flying around.

"And just then, praise the Lord, they left us alone for a while. And old Webb went back there and pretty soon he came back and he wasa-pantin', a-puffin' and a-draggin' another box of ammunition—and carvin' his way through a wall of human flesh and between the top turret gunner's legs.

"And we started shootin' again and shot our way right back to the Channel and just as we were running low again and I was sayin' 'You're really sunk now,' there, praise the Lord, were the Spitfires.

"We had five rounds left in one gun and none in the other. That barrel started out like a shiny new dime inside and there she was solid black inside. Outside the barrel had turned from black to brown and the end of it had crystallized all blue as a baby's eyes.

"Man, we didn't walk out of that nose compartment. You could just roll out on a solid carpet of shells. Why, I was pickin' shells out of me for an hour afterward—out of the tops of my boots and out of my pockets.

"Yes, suh, that was shootin'."

Hess Got a Kick And a Punch on U. S. Visit in 1904

Fresno, Calif., March 9 (AP).—Rudolph Hess, Hitler's former No. 2 man in Nazi Germany, who is a war prisoner of the British, got a punch in the nose and a kick in the pants when he visited America back in 1904, an Army officer recalled today.

The story was told by Capt. O. C. Jones, attached to the Army Air Force Medical Corps at Hammer Field. The setting was on a farm near Redman, Ill., where Jones' grandfather entertained his cousin from Munich. The Munich cousin brought along his own grandson, Hess.

"Hess was a little shaver," Jones recalled, "a couple of years younger than me.

"He could not speak English, and my cousin and I could not speak German, but we got along fine until he broke my chariot," a cracker box mounted on wheels.

There was a fight and Hess turned and ran. Jones administered the coup de grace with a well placed kick to the seat of Hess' pants.

Sale of Foods Canned at Home Requires License

It is illegal for a homemaker to sell home-canned foods to a neighbor or friend under the point rationing system unless the home-canner is licensed to do that, Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa, was advised Monday.

He said he had been asked by a farm woman if she could sell her home-canned foods "to my friends in town that are not able to can anything for themselves and don't know how to can anyway."

Gillette got this ruling for OPA's legal department:

"When home-canned processed foods are sold, they cease to be considered as home-canned processed foods. Points must be given up for their transfer. Unless the person who has produced the home-canned processed food is registered as a processor, he has no authority to sell them or to receive points for such a sale."

President of Turkey Unanimously Reelected

Ankara, Turkey, March 9 (AP).—President Ismet Inonu was unanimously reelected to a second four-year term yesterday by the newly elected national assembly.

The cabinet headed by Premier Sukru Saracoglu, following statute, will resign. It was reliably reported that the ministers for defense, commerce, economy, monopolies, and transport would be changed.

Hoyas Accept Bid to N. I. A. A. Cage Tourney

Meet Opens March 24 At Garden

Georgetown University has accepted an invitation to compete in the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament at Madison Square Garden on March 24, 25, 30, Graduate Manager Joe Gardner announced yesterday.

Acceptance by the Hoyas killed off an invitation to the tournament awaited by George Washington U., Southern Conference champion, in the event Georgetown declined.

The Hoyas cast their lot with the National Intercollegiate A. A., despite the fact they had received "feelers" from the committee conducting the Sportswriters Invitation Tournament at the Garden earlier in the month, said Gardner.

"The invitation from the Sportswriters Tournament was tentative and indefinite," said Gardner. "We preferred the forthright bid from Norman Sheppard, Davidson College athletic director, who is chairman of the Southern District of the N. C. A. A."

Chance Is Slim

Georgetown's chances of receiving a definite bid from the Sportswriters Committee may have been blighted by the Hoyas' one-sided defeat at the hands of Penn State on Saturday night. Georgetown finished its regular season with 19 victories and losses only to the Norfolk Naval Base team, Penn State, Temple and St. John's.

In the N. C. A. A. Tournament, Georgetown will be competing in the Eastern division while Western schools are conducting their tournament at Kansas City. Dartmouth and Penn State and one of the New York colleges are expected to be Georgetown's opposition in the Eastern tournament, with Eastern and Western finalists meeting at the Garden on March 30.

Committee Named

Comprising the committee which tendered the N. C. A. A. bid to Georgetown are, in addition to Sheppard, Adolph Rupp, coach at Kentucky U.; Roy Mondorf of Georgia Tech and Lieut. James Weaver of the Athens (Ga.) Navy Preflight School.

Georgetown's two easy triumphs over G. W. U. before the Colonials won the Southern Conference tournament figured heavily in the choice of the committee.

Coach Elmer Ripley is holding out hope that his big center, Jim Mahnken, will still be available for the Garden tournament despite being sworn into the Army last Saturday. Mahnken is recovering from the extraction of four teeth, and his draft board may defer him until April 1. Leading the New York invasion will be Denny Kraus and Buddy Hassett, who were elected cocaptains by their teammates yesterday.

500 Servicemen See B. C. Fights

More than 500 service men watched with delight last night as the preliminary round of the annual Police Boys Club boxing tournament was staged at Walter Reed Hospital. Two technical knockouts marked the proceedings, though the feature of the night was Johnny Arduini's decision over Bobby Francis in the 110-pound class.

Reds Feature 3 New Stars In Lion Game

Three fine forwards just purchased by the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League for an estimated consideration of $25,000 will be featured by the Providence Reds tonight when they make their farewell 1942-43 appearance against the Washington Lions at Uline Arena, 8:30 o'clock.

The teams move to Providence for a return match tomorrow night, and the local icemen close their season against the Pittsburgh Hornets at Uline Arena Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Ab DeMarco, Norm Calladine and Oscar Aubuchon are the Providence stars claimed by the war-riddled Boston Bruins, but who are not to report until next season. Jock Schmidt, right-winger of Boston's popular "sprout line," who has been loaned the Reds for a week by the Bruins, also is expected to make his debut against the Lions tonight.

Musto, Walker Report Here Tomorrow

Tony Musto and Buddy Walker, colorful principals in the Liberty Athletic Club's 10-round heavyweight boxing feature at Uline Arena Friday night, are to report here tomorrow morning to complete training for their all-important bout, which is to qualify the winner for a big money shot with Arturo Godoy here.

Tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock Musto is to step through a final public workout at the Apollo Athletic Club, while Walker will follow him into the ring at 3 o'clock.

Walker last night was being quoted a 6-to-5 favorite over the rugged Musto on the basis of his superior punch, but tough Tony's backers were closing in rapidly on the odds, and indications are that they will go to the post at even money Friday.

Jim Pofahl, Former Nat, Quits Baseball to Stay in War Work

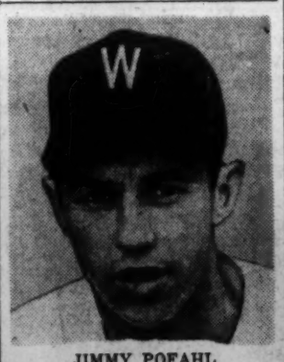
By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, March 9.—Mike Kelley's line-up for the 1943 Minneapolis Baseball Club got two unexpected setbacks today that threatened to cripple the Millers unless Kelley can persuade two players to change their minds.

Jimmy Pofahl, who came back to the Millers from Washington as second baseman in the deal sending Pitcher Owen Scheetz to the Nationals, notified Kelley that he has decided to quit the game. Pofahl said he would remain at his war plant job at Rosemount.

At the same time, hard-hitting Joe Vosmik, Miller outfielder, told Kelley he would continue on his war job at Cleveland unless he is sold to a major league club.

The development quickly caused two other complications aside from altering the prospective Miller line-up. Kelley said that in the Vosmik case he was considering filing a protest with Commissioner K. M. Landis on the ground that the Cleveland club of the American League had violated a rule against tampering with a player of another club.



JIMMY POFAHL

In the Pofahl case the deal to send Scheetz to the majors was contingent upon the transfer to Minneapolis of two acceptable players.

Pimlico Seeking More Dates for Md. Tracks

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 9.—The Maryland Jockey Club, operator of the Pimlico race track, appealed today for an increase in the allotment of racing dates in the State this season, not only for itself but for the entire State racing industry.

In a letter to the Maryland racing commission, the jockey club asserted "it is our firm belief and conviction that the present allotment of 30 racing days at any one track is inadequate if racing in Maryland is to continue on the same high plane for which it is noted.

"Horsemen, meaning the breeders, trainers and others who have devoted their lives and energies to racing, necessarily cannot afford to give Maryland racing the recognition and support which it always has been accorded. The limited opportunities to race horses under present law in Maryland as against greater opportunities in competitive racing sections, all of which have more practical racing laws, preclude any more than a modified expectation of good racing and subsequently reduced revenues to the State.

"The 16 million dollar horse-breeding industry was founded and is based on the special opportunities given to horses bred in the State with substantial rewards limited strictly to our own local breeders.

"For these considered and important reasons we feel very strongly that provisions should be made to allow a reasonable increase in the number of racing days at any one track."

Tigers Head Southward To Indiana

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 9.—Headed by Manager Steve O'Neill and Pitchers Paul Trout and Hal Newhouser, the first official party of Detroit Tigers left tonight for the spring training base at Evansville, Ind., where workouts commence Monday.

O'NEILL

O'Neill, returning to the major league scene as successor to Del Baker, was in high spirits over the team's prospects, largely because of a veteran pitching staff. The club's list of unsigned players has been reduced to five, thus practically assuring O'Neill of a good turnout for initial drills.

The Tigers added the twenty-first star to their service flag with the notification today that Pitcher Clarence Gann, recently purchased from Beaumont of the Texas League, is in the Navy.

9 Eastern Cagers Are Given Letters

Eddie Vaughan, Eastern High forward who left the Ramblers midway of last season to join the armed forces, was awarded a blue "E" along with eight other cagers last night as the school held its annual basketball banquet at the Touchdown Club.

Others reciving letters were Freddy Seaton, All-Metro selection; Capt. Billy Deck, Tommy Wingo, Bob Lamon, Donny Essex, Dave Leonarduzzi, Sam Dellinger and Manager Al Moriarity.

Testimonial Dinner for Cox Tonight

One of the most popular personalities ever to appear on the local scene will be suitably honored tonight when Wiffy Cox, golf professional at Congressional Club, is tendered a testimonial dinner by 100 or more of his friends. The Ambassador Hotel will be the scene starting at 7:30.

George Neville, local lawyer, will act as master of ceremonies at the event marking Cox's departure for a new pro job in Hempstead, Long Island. Among the speakers will be Representative Richard M. Kleberg, Commissioner Guy Mason, John Brooks, jr., Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman, and Dr. Robert A. Keilty.

Phils Seeking Giant Trade; Get Dahlgren

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 9.—Rumors of a deal involving the Phillies and New York Giants circulated today on the heels of the trade that brought First Baseman Babe Dahlgren from Brooklyn to the Phils.

While William D. Cox, the Phillies' new owner, and his manager, Bucky Harris, kept mum about the next step in their rebuilding plans, the name of Ed Levy, was mentioned in unofficial quarters.

Levy, obtained by the Phillies from the New York Yankees during the winter in the deal that sent Nick Etten to the Yanks, is a first baseman and the Giants are known to be seeking a first sacker.

Dahlgren was traded to the Phils for Second Baseman Al Glossop and veteran outfielder Lloyd Waner. 'It was a straight swap with no cash involvd," declared Cox, adding "I think it's a peach of a deal."

"It's our first trade," the 33-year-old magnate continued, "and I hope there will be more."

He added significantly: "We have a trade brewing with another club, but I can't tell you anything about it." Harris kept silent, too.

The addition of the 31-year-old Dahlgren gives the Phillies the man who succeeded Lou Gehrig as the first baseman of the Yankees five years ago and a player who socked many homers at Shibe Park—home grounds of the National Leaguers. He also played with the Boston Red Sox, Boston Braves and Chicago Cubs before joining the Dodgers.

K. O. Koverly And the Mask Tops Mat Show

George (K. O.) Koverly and The Yellow Mask will headline tonight's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. It's a one-hour time limit rematch. The growing interest in this bout indicates a packed house, perhaps to eclipse the turnout for their first session a few weeks ago.

Koverly whipped The Mask in a wild tussle in their first meeting, and, as was the case case with Dusek last week, had the crowd cheering him. Koverly swears he'll remove his foe's mask tonight.

Emil Dusek is back on the card, seeking to atone for his defeat. He will face Max Krauser in the semi-windup.

Transparenti To Fight Petro

Washington's featherweight pride, Danny Petro, winner of 12 out of 13 professional boxing matches, and Lew Transparenti of Baltimore, who has fought seven champions, either featherweight or bantamweight, will headline next Monday night's show at Turner's Arena.

They will clash over the eight-round route in what Promoter Joe Turner calls the "acid test" for the erstwhile Golden Gloves champion.

Intersectional Grid Battles On Way Out

By the Associated Press

New York, March 9.—Intersectional college football games definitely are on the way out for the duration.

Notre Dame's cancellation of contests with two of its traditional rivals—Southern California and Stanford — brought word from every section of the country that few if any college elevens would travel out of their own bailiwicks.

Listed as definitely canceled were the annual Fordham-St. Mary's tussle in New York, University of California at Los Angeles game with Florida, the Army-Texas Aggies game and Boston College's affair with Clemson, Tennessee and Wake Forest. B. C.'s trio of games with the Southern elevens have not been declared off officially but Graduate Manager of Athletics John P. Curley said today:

"Boston College has no thought of any intersectional games this fall."

Fordham is planning on building almost an entirely new schedule. In addition to the cancellation of the St. Mary's game, Graduate Manager Jack Coffey listed as very doubtful games with Missouri, Texas Christian, Tennessee and Purdue.

"And I understand the North Carolina Preflight's schedule will be confined to teams within the State," said Coffey. "In which case that leaves us with Holy Cross and North Carolina, and I'm not even sure about the latter.

Other intersectional frays listed as doubtful include Oklahoma-Temple at Oklahoma City, Pennsylvania's games with Michigan and North Carolina at Philadelphia, Temple's contests with Southern Methodist at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh-Southern Methodist at Dallas, Colgate-Duke at Durham, Pittsburg-Nebraska at Lincoln, Penn State-Georgia at Athens, Penn State-Michigan State at State College, Oregon-Texas at Portland and Harvard-Michigan at Cambridge.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Until somebody comes along with a better claim, the liveliest Army rejectee would seem to be Greg Rice, the 4-F'er, who knocked nine seconds off the world record for the 2½ miles at the Catholic U. track meet the other night.

POVICH

The former Notre Dame boy, who hasn't finished anywhere except first in his last 61 races against the best competition they could dig up for him, gets around pretty well for a fellow who couldn't pass his Army physical. If he had been pushed the other night, he thinks he might have lopped 15 seconds off the record.

Rice has a double hernia. The amazing thing about his running is that he does it while wearing a double truss. It's a tailor-made support that fits against his lower abdomen. That sort of thing isn't supposed to be conducive to fast locomotion, but apparently it doesn't bother Rice.

When he's not beating the ears off some field of runners, Rice is an accountant for a Brooklyn toy firm. He takes the long subway ride to Columbia University every night and works out around the Columbia track, in the dark. He says he's a better runner since he left college than he was in his undergraduate days. He hasn't been beaten since long before Pearl Harbor, February, 1940, to be exact.

Joe McCluskey, the old Fordham runner who competed against Rice the other night, calls Greg a "funny kind of runner." He says Rice looks like a plodder who should be easy to catch up with, "but somehow you never can do it. I know, because I've run against him 27 times and never could catch him. They tell me he's barrel chest, but I wouldn't know about that. I've never seen anything but his back."

It was no upset when the Phils traded Roberto Ortiz, the big Cuban outfielder, to the Dodgers the other day. Ortiz was a cinch to leave the Phils from the moment Bucky Harris got the job of managing the team.

Ortiz had been in Harris' hair for four seasons when Bucky managed the Nats. Originally he came to Washington s a pitcher, but when Harris discovered he couldn't pitch, he tried him as an outfielder. Tht was no dice, either, and many an afternoon Harris was anguished by the stumbling play of the big Cuban in the outfield. As regularly as Harris sent him back to the minors, Clark Griffith would bring him back to the Nats.

Harris thought he was rid of Ortiz when he retired as the Nats' manager, but meanwhile the Phils drafted the Cuban from the Nats' Chattanooga club and when Harris was given the Philadelphia job he had Ortiz back. It didn't take him long to dispose of the fellow. In fact it was the first deal that Harris made as manager of the Phils. Despite the fact that as of last weekend, Harris had only four ball players signed to Phils' contracts, he got rid of Ortiz hurriedly.

Georgetown University accepted the bid for the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship basketball tournament because the school wanted to redeem itself in New York, for its horrible showing against St. John's in the Garden.

"We played our worst game of the season that night in the Garden against St. John's," says Joe Gardner, the Hoyas' athletic director, "and we want to show our friends up there that it was simply an off-night. Ordinarily we might have been content to rack up at the end of the season and rest on our showing of 19 victories in 23 games, but we can't let this opportunity to play in the Garden again pass."

Gardner declares that on many another night during the season the Hoyas played well enough to beat St. John's or any other team, but "we saved our most dismal effort for our most important game. I only wish St. John's was in the National Intercollegiate A. A. tournament. We'd like another crack at them."

Inventories Seen Near Top At End of '42

Business inventories were at near-peak levels at the end of 1942 despite record-breaking consumer purchases and expanding war production, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The year-end inventory figure of $28,300,000,000 was about 1 billion dollars less than the total value reported last June 30, but exceeded by $1,250,000,000 the value reported at the beginning of 1942.

With present stocks carried at higher prices than those of last year, the physical volume of inventories is now believed somewhat below the level of a year ago.

Wholesale stocks, currently valued at less than 4 billion dollars are lower than at any time in almost two years. They have fallen from a wartime high of $4,900,000,000 early last year.

Retail inventories hit an all-time peak of $7,500,000,000 at the end of June but at the year's end were down to $6,700,000,000, little changed from their value at the beginning of 1942.

"Reports indicate that large independent stores—those with annual sales in excess of $200,000—increased the value of their inventories by 4 per cent during the year," the department said. "On the other hand, all other size brackets in the retail field show a drop over the period, the largest decrease, 6 per cent, occurring in the smallest size bracket with annual sales under $10,000."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Bank Assets Soar

National Bank assets rose more than 11 billion dollars to a new record high of nearly 55 billion dollars in 1942 while deposits jumped an almost equal amount to a record total of $50,649,000,000, Comptroller of Currency Preston Delano reported yesterday.

Assets and deposits showed their greatest gain in the last six months of the year, Delano reported, assets rising $10,062,000,000 since June 30 to a total of $54,780,978,000, while deposits increased $9,990,000,000 in the same period and $11,243,000,000 for the entire year.

Loans and discounts declined $1,551,000,000 during the year and $701,000,000 since June 30. Loans and discounts totaled $10,201,000,000 on December 31.

The report was based on returns from 5,087 active national banks covered by the bank call of last December 31.

Bankers Plan Conference

In place of the usual convention out of the city, the District of Columbia Bankers Association this year will hold a two-day conference in the Mayflower Hotel on June 4 and 5.

President John A. Reilly said yesterday that the program will include a business session and speeches on the first day and the annual election of officers on the second day. Tentative plans include a banquet on the night of June 5.

Safeway Sales Up 1.19 Per Cent

Sales of Safeway Stores, Inc., for the four weeks ended February 27 were $45,079,256, compared with $44,549,585 for the four weeks ended February 28, 1942, an increase of 1.19 per cent.

For the eight weeks ended February 27, 1943, sales amounted to $88,530,647, compared with $90,284,708 for the eight weeks ended February 28, 1942, a decrease of 1.94 per cent.

Stores in operation as of February 27, 1943, were 2510, compared with 2862 on February 28, 1942.

Auditors' Forum Tomorrow

A forum on bank operating problems will be conducted by Millard S. Yeatman of the Hamilton National Bank at a meeting tomorrow night of the auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association in the Lee-Sheraton Hotel.

Orders 20 Locomotives

The Southern Pacific Co. has ordered 20 giant steam locomotives at a cost of about five million dollars, according to word received here by C. G. Mengel, general agent of the railroad in Washington. Deliveries are expected to start in October. The order was placed with the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Reports on Local Payments

The Equitable Life Assurace Society paid $1,591,662 in benefits to District of Columbia families in 1942, it was announced yesterday. Of this amount, $535,200 went to widows, children and other beneficiaries here and $248,453 to older persons in the form of annuities. Another $808,900 was distributed to policyholders in the form of matured endowments, dividends and other payments.

Benefit payments by the Equitable Society throughout the Nation aggregated $215,354,000 in 1942.

Air Express Rises Sharply

American Airlines, Inc., started 1943 with a marked increase in air mail and express, according to M. D. Miller, manager of freight. In January 1,678,198 pounds of air mail were flown, as contrasted with 945,526 pounds flown during the same month in 1942. This was an increase of more than 77 per cent.

Air express shows an even greater increase with 1,224,196 pounds flown in January, 1943, as against 678,643 pounds in January, 1942. This is an increase of 80.39 per cent.

Candy Sales Gain in Month

The Nation spent $33,002,000 for confectionery and chocolate products in January, an increase of 16 per cent over a year ago.

In reporting this yesterday, the Census Bureau said that, measured in pounds, sales were only 4 per cent larger than in January of 1942.

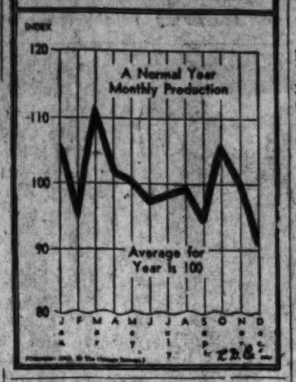
The only area to show a decline was New England, which paid $2,773,000 in January to satisfy its sweet tooth, a drop of 7 per cent from a year ago.

Mutual Benefit Assets Gain

The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. reported yesterday in an annual statement for 1942 total assets rose $38,634,854 during the year to a record of $834,552,067. Of the total, 24.8 per cent was invested in Government bonds, the company added. Other bonds aggregated $360,975,552.

During 1942, the statement said, the company experienced the lowest mortality level since 1927, or a rate 10 per cent lower than the average for the last ten years. This decline was after war claims had been taken into consideration.

Steel Production in a Normal Year



Late Earnings Statements

Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. reported its consolidated net income for 1942 was $20,457,601, equal to $9.24 a share, compared with $21,416,566, or $9.67 a share in 1941. The company added $4,000,000 to its reserve for contingencies, boosting the sum set aside for postwar readjustment and "other uncertainties" to $17,000,000.

Beech Nut Packing Co. and subsidiary reported net profit of $2,634,680, or $6.02 a common share, in 1942, compared with $2,709,090, or $6.19 a share, in 1941.

Bond Cashers Term Taxes Vital to Victory

By Chandler P. Brossard
Post Staff Writer

Shyly, and muttering to herself, an elderly woman with a mink furpiece moved to the "Return War Bonds Here" window, and, before the clerk noticed her, said, "I'm sorry, awful sorry, for having to do this, but there's no other way I can pay my income tax."

A clerk told her to get her two $25 war bonds certified in the next room and then return. Still muttering, she moved on through the throng in the United States Treasury.

None of the scores of people returning their war bonds for the initial investment appeared to notice the old woman in her dismay. All were too busy unfolding their bonds and turning them in. They were of the usual crowd material: Old men, old women, young boys, young girls, mothers with children, fat and thin, calm and distressed. All wanted the war bond money to pay their income taxes.

Turned in Four Bonds

First to be queried was one Edward L. Hogan, WPA employe, of 4901 North Seventeenth Street, Arlington, Va. Hogan, heavy in build and most cooperative, revealed that he had just turned in four $25 bonds, leaving eight at home to mature.

"I hate to do it," he said, "but I can't think of any other way to pay the taxes. The war needs the money and I'm going to keep on giving 10 per cent of my pay each week. Brother, it's tough, this income tax; it's necessary, but tough." He began buying the securities last fall.

Outside, although it was cold and windy, C. J. Ware asserted in a manner befitting his outward reserve and age, that he had turned in two $25 bonds and had eight left, all purchased within the last seven or eight months. Immune to the cold, so it seemed, Ware declared "necessity, pure and simple," made him cash the bonds in.

"This tax is high," he said, "but we gotta win the war."

Ware has worked for the Bureau of Internal Revenue since 1907 and lives in Langston Terrace Apartments. He smiled as he went down the steps.

Only One for Her

A fine-looking young lady about 20 years old, very kindly told of returning one of her seven $25 war bonds collected through weekly payroll deductions.

"Of course, it's dreadful to turn in the bonds when the war is on," she explained, "only I have to pay the taxes." A telephone company worker, who lives at 3034 R Street Northwest, she said she had been in Washington six months.

Melvin Ritchie, 18, of 607 South Carolina Avenue Southeast next revealed he had turned in one of his eight or nine $25 bonds with boyish sobriety and regret. He got the bonds through payroll deductions at the Navy Yard where he is an apprentice machinist nd from where he will leave soon for the Army.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue is one of two places where, this year, you deal in the business of income tax. Here, too, the crowd was great in size but orderly.

Bird-like fellow with an accent, a hotel waiter, nodded gravely and said the whole thing was confusing, very expensive, maybe too high, maybe "gonna be more," and agreed that it was the only thing for the Government to do. This year's tax is a big jump over last year's, he assured, but he will not go hungry or without the pot to cook in.

Same Sentiment

Subsequently, Mrs. Flora B. Gray of 1843 Fourteenth Street Northwest held the hotel man's identical sentiments to the ultimate groan.

"But it's all for the best," she said. Mrs. Gray is a widow and has worked for 30 years with the Railroad Retirement Board.

No one seemed greatly puzzled by the tax procedure except your reporter, who was even more shattered when Mrs. Mary Fowler of 1411 T Street Southeast, said she thought the entire matter was perfectly clear "and just, too."

Hampton Hospital Head Resigns

Hampton, Va., March 9 (AP). — Henry L. Goodloe, who has been superintendent of Dixie Hospital for more than three and a half years, has submitted his resignation to the board of directors.

The resignation was accepted "with regret" and no successor was appointed last night at the board meeting.

First Report In Red Cross Drive Made

A Marine Corps major back from Guadalcanal, box lunches prepared by the canteen corps and an encouraging financial report of $320,137 greeted the general business division of the District Red Cross meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Building yesterday to hear first general campaign figures in the metropolitan area's $1,555,400 war fund drive.

Of the total collected since the Red Cross fired its opening guns March 4, $44,137 was added yesterday when reports came from chairman of four groups—general business, residential, city and Montgomery County units.

Montgomery, first nearby county to announce early figures, has collected $15,000 of its $46, 710 quota. The general business division has received $17,714; the residential division reported $9556; and the remainder of approximately $3000 was credited to the city division.

Tells of Good Work

Guest speaker was Maj. Donald Dixon, recently returned from Guadalcanal, who told the volunteers: "You workers here are in some ways not as fortunate as we who have been at the battlefronts; you are constantly putting out your best efforts without seeing the results of your work.

"The Red Cross is an old friend of mine. I have worked with it ever since I entered the service and have seen it in action from Cuba to Guadalcanal. It was on Guadalcanal, by the way, that the Red Cross provided us with the first writing paper—but its greatest single contribution there was the blood plasma.

Saves Major's Life

"I have heard it said that if the Red Cross collected only blood plasma it would be doing its duty for our fighting men. And I've heard it first-hand, a very good friend of mine, a major, was leading his battalion in a forward position on Guadalcanal and was wounded pretty deeply. The first doctor who saw him noted his weakened condition and ashen face and said, 'I'm afraid we can't save this man.'

"But immediately he was given Red Cross blood plasma and had gained so much strength by the time a jeep came to take him to a base hospital that he was able to sit up front beside the driver and show him the way back. And he is not the only man I've seen who was brought from the brink of death by blood plasma."

Chairmen, Red Cross executives and guests contributed 25 cents to the canteen corps to cover the cost of the box lunches.

Blood Donors Asked In Prince William

Special Dispatch to The Post

Manassas, Va., March 9.—Mrs. W. L. Lloyd, chairman of the Prince William County Chapter, American Red Cross, today called for volunteers to donate to the second blood bank sponsored by the chapter and to be held in the Trinity Parish Hall here Saturday. A mobile blood donor unit from Washington will make examinations and collect blood between 9:15 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

Volunteers are requested to register with the following members of the local chapter; Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. E. H. Marstellar, Mrs. Mamie Delaney.

Those who will assist with the blood bank are: Mrs. C. A. Sinclair, jr., Mrs. Stewart McBryde, jr., Mrs. J. L. Bushong, Mrs. George Turberville, Mrs. Earl Hurst and the Rev. Thomas G. Faulkner.

Red Cross Aids Sailor Here in Coast Tragedy

The vigilant watch of the Red Cross over the welfare of servicemen both at home and overseas was illustrated dramatically at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., when Miss Mary Dunn, Red Cross field director, learned that the wife of an enlisted man stationed there had been killed in Los Angeles.

It was 11:20 p. m. when the news was received that the sailor's wife had been struck by a hit-and-run driver in the dimout. The husband was wanted for the inquest by the West Coast authorities—so the Red Cross went into action.

By 2:30 a. m. Miss Dunn had made two long-distance calls to California and had arranged priorties on a westbound plane. The sailor was packed off to Washington National Airport to catch a plane at 6:30 a. m.

And to complete arrangements, Miss Dunn made reservations for him to return to his next station in the Midwest by a specified date.

No doubt the story did much to inspire the hospital staff contribution of $2800 to the metropolitan area $1,555,400 campaign, even though the entire quota there was $1750. Patients were not solicited but many gave donations anyway—and collections have just begun.

15 Deserted Thoroughbreds To Go on Horse Auction Block

Fifteen of the 19 thoroughbred horses deserted at the Rock Creek Riding Club, 8000 Connecticut Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., two weeks ago will be sold at auction March 17 at 10 a. m. on the Counselman farm near Norbeck, Md., by order of Montgomery County Sheriff R. W. Farmre.

Since the animals were rescued and placed on a steady diet following their discovery at the once swank club, they have been living at the Counselman farm, currently operated by William Thiess. The stables there, empty until the refugees arrived, formerly housed the show horses and hunters of Ralph P. Counselman, who has since moved them to Potomac, Md. The remaining four of the 19 mounts were claimed by their owners.

The sale will be conducted for William J. Hines, Norbeck farmer who holds claims against William Todd, manager of the club, for feed and grain which he said were not paid for.

Best bred of the animals to go on the auction block is Ann C., chestnut daughter of Bright Knight, who once raced for B. B. Jones' famed Audley Farm at Berryville, Va. She has at her side a month-old colt by Todd's thoroughbred stallion, Jouster, a son of imported Tournament II. Several other mares are due to foal shortly.

Also to be auctioned are four polo sticks, one horse blanket, two English saddles, one McClellan saddle, one lightweight racing saddle, two halters, half a keg of horse shoes, nine secondhand tires, a trailer, a forge and anvil, a lot of veterinary medicine and other miscellaneous stable supplies.

Ozlin Explains Minority Stand

Richmond, Va., March 9 (AP).—Thomas W. Ozlin of the State Reciprocity Board, asserted today that States to the north of Virginia "were used as cat's paws by representatives of the powerful trucking interests of North Carolina" to have this State waive its 2 per cent gross receipts tax on out-of-State commercial vehicles.

In a "minority report" letter to Governor Darden, Ozlin argued vigorously against the recommendation by the other two members of the board and the governor that the tax and the $1 registration fee on foreign vehicles be suspended for the duration of the war in the case of North Carolina as well as other States.

Conceding that a prior recommendation by the board would have applied largely to North Carolina alone, Ozlin wrote that 'I state with all the emphasis at my command that it is proper to make an exception in the case of North Carolina.

"Among all the States along the Atlantic Seaboard, north of Florida to Maine, North Carolina and Virginia are the only two States which have a gross receipts tax reciprocally imposed on the commercial vehicles of each other."

Alexandria Churches Plan Lenten Rites

Episcopal churches of Alexandria, Va., in an effort to cooperate with the Government in travel conservation, will sponsor unified Lenten services, beginning today—Ash Wednesday.

Cooperating congregations are Christ Church, of which the Edward R. Welles is rector, and where George Washington was a vestryman; Emanuel, the Rev. Edward E. Tate; Grace, the Rev. Leon N. Laylor, and St. Paul's, the Rev. A. T. Mollegen, acting rector.

Services today will include Holy Communion at 7 a. m. and 11 a. m., Christ Church; Communion, 9:30 a. m., St. Paul's; Communion, 10 a. m., Grace Church; children's service, 5 p. m., Christ Church, and evening prayer and sermon, 8 p. m., Grace Church.

There will be wartime prayers daily at 12:05 p. m. and evening prayer and sermon on Wednesdays at 8 o'clock at Grace Church. On Lenten Thursdays there will be services at 11 a. m. at Christ Church and St. Paul's, and at 8 p. m. at Emmanuel Church. On Lenten Fridays at 12:05 p. m., there will be noon-day prayers and a brief sermon at St. Paul's.

County Teachers Ask Pay Increase of 10%

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., March 9.—An increase of 10 per cent for teachers' salaries was asked of the Frederick County Board of Supervisors by members of the school board who attended a budget session.

The final budget has not been completed. It is contended the increase is necessary to enable teachers to meet rising costs of living. Numerous teachers have resigned in recent months to accept more lucrative positions in other fields, Leslie D. Kline, superintendent, said today.

The 'Big Freeze' Is On at WPB

No new employes are being hired by War Production Board. The big "freeze" is on. It's entirely possible, in fact, that WPB will be compelled to reduce its present number of employes. Budget Bureau has refused to ask Congress for a deficiency appropriation for WPB and operating expenses must be cut down if the agency is to live within its 1943 appropriation. Charles E. Wilson, the new hard-hitting vice chairman, ordered the halt on hiring in a strongly worded memo to bureau chiefs in which he said in part: "The recruitment of additional personnel, departmental and field, is hereby suspended as of this date, except by my specific approval. This suspension shall remain in full effect until all major organization units are advised individually as to the total personnel that may be employed for the balance of the fiscal year."

KLUTTZ

Wilson explained that the Budget Bureau had placed a 22,000 limit on WPB's staff. The agency, he said, had 21,500 employes now with 2400 employes on requisition. Personal commitments already made, Wilson said, could be completed which would bring the WPB staff to approximately 23,900, but when it reached that point it apparently would have to be cut back to 22,000. Moreover, Wilson ordered a reduction in travel, phone calls, telegrams and printing. WPB merely happens to be the first agency to "freeze" recruitment. There will be others, plenty of them. Informal "freeze" orders already are in effect at Office of War Information, War Labor Board and others, but the clamp down on hiring will be extended to just about every agency here in the immediate future.

Office of War Information's domestic branch, under Mike Cowles, has been reorganized. Under Cowles will be two assistants, James Allen and William Lewis. Allen will handle the news, publications and special services. Under Lewis will be radio and graphics. Abe Feller will be moved up to general counsel of OWI, a new job. Jack Fleming's publications and graphics unit will be divided between Allen and Lewis and Jack will become an assistant to Allen. Bob Huse will become chief of the field division. The intelligence bureau is being abolished and what activities reman will be dumped into the special services unit.

A New Office

War Production Board soon will announce the creation of a new office of civilian economy headed by a "big name." The big name, in all likelihood, will be Chester Davis, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Davis has been approached about the job, but he hasn't accepted it. The St. Louis job pays him around $20,000 a year and the top salary he could be paid at WPB is $8000. An effort is being made to arrange a leave of absence for him from the bank. Davis held several Agriculture Department jobs before he joined Federal Reserve. Under present plans, the Office of Civilian Supply would remain in WPB. Proposals for an independent office have been scuttled. Joe Weiner, the able head of OCS, would remain. He's credited with doing a good job, but the WPB powers want a "big name."

The personnel work of the Office of Emergency Management has been abolished by the Budget Bureau. The bureau complimented Charles Mills for performing an excellent job, but it decided that personnel should be a part of the operating program. This means that the new war agencies will now do their own personnel work. OEM's central administrative services will continue to handle budgets, procurement, mimeographing and the like. The budget survey was made at the request of Congress. . . . Duties of the new vice chairmen of WPB will be announced this week by Donald Nelson. Vice Chairman Donald Davis will take over industry branches.

War Manpower Czar Paul McNutt is setting up a temporary committee to review and answer draft deferment problems of the Federal employes. This committee must be set up before the agencies can request deferments from local draft boards. Representatives of Selective Service and Civil Service will sit on the committee, which will be announced today. This committee will serve until the President appoints a permanent committee in War Manpower to keep tab on draft deferments in Government.

Meantime, no requests for deferments should be sent to the President. The President's order, in effect, reestablishes the old "key" list of employes that both Civil Service and War Manpower cleared last December before the President abruptly ordered all draft deferments in Government canceled. As a start, War Manpower will probably okay requests for deferments of persons on the "key" list; that is, of course, if there have been no other changes in the list since last fall. The agencies will ask for deferments direct of local draft boards and the War Manpower committee will review them at the end of each month.

Pay Increase Senate Voted May Be Hiked

House Group Shows Consideration for D. C. Employes in Lower Brackets

An increase in the pay raises voted by the Senate to lower-bracket District police and firemen appeared in the offing yesterday, following the completion of a House District subcommittee hearing on the local pay raise legislation.

Representative McMillan (Democrat) of South Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee, said that his group would meet again Thursday and try to report the bills to the full committee on that day.

He indicated, moreover, that the subcommittee would give particular attention to the problem of the low-salaried employes, and that the original McCarran proposal for a fixed "bonus" raise would at least be considered.

Flat Raise Considered

Also discussed at the session was the possibility of substituting a flat 10 per cent raise for the scale of increases ranging from $100 to $300 now in the police and fire bill. This is the same treatment afforded in the teachers' bill and was accepted by the Commissioners.

Several subcommittee members evinced an interest in the flat bonus proposal as the meeting progressed, as a means of granting higher percentage increases to the low-bracket groups. The original pay bill sponsored by Senator McCarran, chairman of the Senate District Committee, was cited to the committee. This would have given a $350 annual raise to all of the uniformed service below the rank of captain.

Paul W. Proctor of the police association told the meeting that the present bill—the work of Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio—would mean only a 5.2 per cent over-all raise for starting policemen, adding that almost all of this would be taken away by the victory tax. Assistant Superintendent of Police Harvey G. Callahan also testified that a percentage plan might tend to destroy pay differentials between various grades of the service.

For Sake of Conformity

The Commissioners reiterated the position stated to the Senate committee that the present bills, or a 10 per cent raise throughout, should be enacted in order to maintain a conformity with provisions of the Federal overtime pay bill.

It was doubtful that any change would be made in the teachers' bill which grants a 10 per cent increase. Superintendent of Schools Ballou asked its enactment as is, in the interests of expediency. He declared that the raises it provided were not sufficient to give proper relief, but said that a new bill was being drafted and would be offered as a replacement when the pending measure expires on April 30.

The police bill would grant the raise for the duration.

Victory Sidelights

Army to Give Tests Friday For Students

By the Associated Press

Friday, April 2, will be examination day for the thousands of high school and college youths who hope to participate in the Army's specialized training program.

Uniform preinduction examinations to determine qualifications of the students will be given at all high schools and colleges where applications have been received.

Success in the examination, the War Department emphasized today, will not assure participation in the program, but will constitute a part of the individual's record and will be considered in connection with subsequent Army tests.

Those eligible:

High school and preparatory school graduates who will have attained their seventeenth but not their twenty-second birthday by July 1, regardless of whether they are attending college.

High school and preparatory school seniors who will be graduated by July 1, provided they will have attained their seventeenth and not their twentieth birthday by that date.

Students who have attained their seventeenth and not their twenty-second birthday by July 1, who do not hold certificates of graduation from a secondary school but who are attending accredited colleges or universities.

The department said that those under 18 who achieve "outstanding scores" in the examination will be invited to join the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps. They will not be called to active service, however, until the end of the school term which is current on their eighteenth birthdays.

by taking eight for $929. Other buyers, said Mrs. S. W. Fletcher, cashier of the sale, were:

George H. Ayers, of Warrenton, 3 cows, $263; J. E. Capps, of the Washington Aircraft School, 140 Q Street Northeast, 2 cows, $245; R. N. Russell, of Marshall, Va., 1 cow, $115; Leon Arnold of Fairfax, Va., 5 cows, $584; Don Taylor, of Warrenton, cow and calf, $175, and Wise Buchanan, of Opal, Va., 1 bull, $115.

Top price for a Guernsey was $148; a Holstein, $182; a Shorthorn (beef), $156.

Percy Cropp of Cropp Postoffice, Va., bought himself a brown bossie for $99. He backed his truck up to Kelly's dairy barn, led the Guernsey in the drove home to add her to his small herd.

Kelly said he put his farm, four miles north of Warrenton, up for public sale because he can't get help and can't operate it alone. His two sons are in the service. J. Howard Kelly, 23, is in the Navy; Arthur T. Kelly, 22, wears the uniform of the Army Air Forces.

Fauquier County is one Virginia county—at least one—in which the problem of supplying food is not altogether higher prices for farm products, the farmers say. It is, according to them, either (a) more labor, or (b) labor-saving machinery.

County Agent Walter B. Nourse yesterday summed up the problem of farmers getting machinery. For the county's 1800 active farms, he said, the United States Department of Agriculture War Board has authorized the sale of only 4 new wheat drills; 3 new corn planters, 2 new corn cultivators and 1 grain binder.

The machinery, it was explained, is rationed by five men who comprise the Farm Machinery Ration Committee for the county. They are trying to be Solomons in awarding available tools, it was said.

The labor problem, said Nourse, who is secretary to the Farm Machinery Rationing Committee, is one of competing with war industry and Government construction. Said Nourse:

"The Government is competing with Fauquier's farmers to hire farm labor in construction of a cantonment paying approximately $5 a day for common labor while farmers are not permitted to figure increased cost of labor in establishing parity and ceiling prices for agriculture products.

"Also in competing for farm labor the Government is sending Army trucks throughout the county to collect laborers and haul them to the site of construction."

The site of construction, Nourse said, was Vint Hill Farm, 700 acres, just outside Warrenton, taken over last fall by the Government.

Men in Warrenton and other nearby Virginia towns, it was said, prefer to work either at the cantonment or in Washington for three days, making more than can be paid them on farms for five days of work, and remain idle for the other two days.

The real crisis will come, Nourse said, in four weeks—time for spring planting. There won't be enough help for farmers to get out their regular crops, he said, and the Agriculture Department's program calls for more production than last year. Only 15 per cent of the normal amount of early plowing has been done, he said.

One farmer who walked into Nourse's office to fill out the required work sheet for his farm summed up the situation in his opinion this way:

"A lot of folks are going on a 'diet' soon, as sure as God made green apples, if something isn't done in Washington in the next two weeks."

Professional, Business Leaders Urge Defeat of Job Grab Bill

A manifesto signed by a hundred outstanding men and women throughout the country was sent to the Senate yesterday asking defeat of the McKellar job confirmation bill. The document termed the measure "a repudiation of the merit system."

The McKellar bill, due to be reported to the Senate this week, originally provided that Senate approval would have to be obtained to fill any job in the Federal service paying more than $4500 a year. It was amended by the Senate Judiciary Committee, however, to exempt the competitive classified civil service, technicians and craftsmen and employes of the FBI and TVA.

See Progress Periled

"For 60 years," the manifesto declared, "public opinion in the United States has steadfastly demanded extension of the principle that appointments to positions in the Federal Government should rest on the basis of merit, and that such positions should not be made the football of party politics. Today that progress of 60 years is gravely threatened.

"The McKellar bill pending in the Senate of the United States would substitute political tests for the qualification of merit."

After terming the bill a "repudiation of the merit system" which would be "dangerous in time of peace" and would "spell disaster" in wartime, the letter continued:

"Acceptability to the Senate is a qualification which major policy-making officials traditionally must meet. But an arbitrary salary limitation such as the bill as introduced established can never isolate policy-making officials. Nor can they be segregated by such a formula as it is reported the Judiciary Committee will recommend. Passage of any such bill would accomplish none of the reforms its advocates demand. It would succeed only in demoralizing hard-pressed agencies whose activities are wholly devoted to prosecution of the war. It would destroy in a single day the integrity of the Federal service."

Signers were listed as editors, educators, public officials, artists, scientists, authors, engineers, lawyers, businessmen and labor leaders. They included William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette, and Norman Thomas, Socialist leader.

Mason Says U.S. Agencies Harm D. C.

Many Offices Operate to Favor Government, Says District Leader

A trend toward federalization of the District government was noted last night by Commissioner Guy Mason, who charged that Congress has not exercised sufficient caution in the creation of local agencies—many of which, he said, are not controlled by the Commissioners and, moreover, through Government grants, are subject to Federal influence.

"The question is, should the Federal Government, through Federal grants, so control those agencies which Congress has set up as to influence either their activity or their ultimate conclusions to favor Federal Government over the residents of the District of Columbia, be those residents taxpayers or nontaxpayers?"

His question was directed to members of the District Bar Association, whom he charged with the responsibility of carefully examining all proposals emanating from Federal departments which, he said, look on Washington as something of a guinea pig by "which certain philosophies and theories may be tried."

Cites "Pressure"

Mason, main speaker on the association's "District of Columbia Night" meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, declared that Washington's four most active municipal departments—police, fire, health and welfare—are "not only under constant Federal pressure but frequent Federal influence."

"At the present time," he continued, "we (the Commissioners) participate in, but do not have absolute jurisdiction over, the Licensure Healing Act—that is the administration of doctors, etc., to practice in the District of Columbia; the Real Estate Commission; the Recorder of Deeds; the Board of Public Welfare, Community Center and Playgrounds Department, now known as the Recreation Board; the Examining Boards, the Public Library and public schools."

The Commissioner said a bill will be introduced shortly to transfer to the Commissioners all of the powers and authority now exercised by the Board of Public Welfare and making the board a body having only advisory and visitorial powers.

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, and Senator Arthur Capper, a member of the Senate District Committee, spoke briefly concerning District legislation now pending in Congress.

Gift to Fire Department

Among the honored guests were virtually all of the District government department heads and several members of the local judiciary.

On behalf of the association a combination resuscitator-aspirator-inhalator was presented to Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, who accepted it for Rescue Squad No. 2 with expressions of gratitude and the comment that in his 32 years experience "it's the first time anybody ever gave the fire department anything."

The association almost unanimously adopted the recommendation of its endowment committee that its functions be transferred to a separate corporation which would receive gifts and bequests to form an endowment for carrying on the association's objectives.

City News In Brief

A resolution opposing the McKellar bill which would substitute a Commissioner of Police for the major and superintendent was adopted last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Cizitens Association.

Members of the association were shown a motion picture, "Tillie and Billie," by the Capital Transit Co.

The unit met at the home of Mrs. Frank M. Thompson, president, 1536 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

The second annual junior one-act play tournament will open at 7:30 p. m. today at Jefferson Junior High School, Eighth and H Streets Southwest, under sponsorship of the District Recreation Department.

On the opening night, four plays will be presented: "The Magic Cookie Jar," by the Jefferson group; "The Old Fogie," by the Hoover Playground group; "The Duke and the Princesses," by the Garfield Playground, and "The Weather Clerk," by the Virginia Avenue Playground Club.

The remaining plays will be given on March 17 at Stuart Junior High School and on March 19 at Park View School. The finals will be held March 24 at Powell Junior

Supply Shrinking

Liquor Stores May Shorten Selling Hours

The possibility of shorter hours for Washington liquor stores, for the purpose of conserving rapidly diminishing stocks, was being considered esterday, as the Retail Liquor Dealers Association sent out questionnaires to all dealers in the District.

P. A. Sugrue, president of the association, said the questionnaires asked what shortened opening and closing hours would be most convenient for most dealers and whether dealers favored closing on holidays.

Results of the poll, Sugrue said, will be forwarded to the District Alcoholic Control Board, so that official action can be taken to control the legal hours of operation of all liquor stores in the District.

Independent dealers, not affiliated with the association, said they were against submitting the results to the ABC Board, since losses of operating time for the stores probably would be for a period beyond the war and that original hours of operation would be hard to regain.

Retail liquor stores in the downtown section already are fixing their own hours, keeping open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., rather than the allowed 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. They feel that uptown stores should follow a similar modus operandi, and the association says such a result cannot be brought about without a ruling from the ABC Board.

The questionnaires, sent out yesterday, are expected to be returned within four days, Sugrue said, and the majority of answers will be presented to the ABC Board for action. The holiday closing question, he said, undoubtedly will meet with almost unanimous approval, but he expressed doubt as to how large the majority would be for specific opening and closing hours.

Keech Pushes Bill to Outlaw Baby Brokers

Swift official action to outlaw baby-brokers in Washington was promised yesterday at the District Building, where it was revealed that Corporation Counsel Richmond Keech has put in motion the legislative machinery to reintroduce in Congress the bill for mandatory licensing of child-placing agents.

Keech said he sent the bill, as finally passed last year by the House, to the Public Welfare Department, with a request for comments to be presented to the Commissioners. He asked that especial consideration be given the Schulte amendments to the bill which were held to be responsible for its ultimate death in the Senate District Committee.

Mason to Scan Bill

Commissioner Guy Mason said that the Commissioners favored any legislation which would prevent "the exploitation of children for anyone's benefit other than their own." He said he would study the bill, with which he is not familiar, before Keech presents it to the board.

One means of expediting the course of the legislation was believed by Keech to be possible in by-passing the Budget Bureau, which must pass on all District legislation, and which in the past has held up proposals for months before reporting on them. If the request for legislation is reentered in exactly the same form as it was last year, Keech said, it could be considered that the Budget Bureau already had cleared it once and need not be consulted again. He thought that since the Commissioners were so overwhelmingly in favor of the original bill there would be little doubt of similar approval this year.

More Comment Sought

Mason, however, indicated that he might ask various social agencies for comment on the bill and on the over-all picture of adoption and infant welfare in the District.

"The Commissioners are opposed individually and collectively to the exploitation of children for anyone's welfare other than the children's," Mason said. "The matter of dealing with children unfortunate enough to be without parents is a serious one—a matter in which the child has a tremendous potential interest and the State an ever-present interest.

"Every safeguard should be thrown around such children to see that they attain that position in the sun to which the normal child is entitled, and usually obtains. It is the duty of the State to do this, as its citizens of tomorrow in the final analysis have only that character which is developed in childhood. The State should see that all children, legitimate or otherwise, are accorded that protection and those opportunities which, under normal process, will make good citizens. We favor any legislation which will achieve that end.

"The amended bill is now before the public welfare department, and when it is returned to the Commissioners for final report it will be given careful study by the Commissioners—and will be viewed from the points of what is best for the child and for the District."

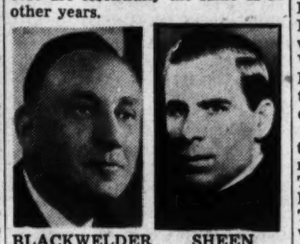
Traditional Services Open Lent Today

Catholics and Protestants Alike to Take Part In Annual Ash Wednesday Rites

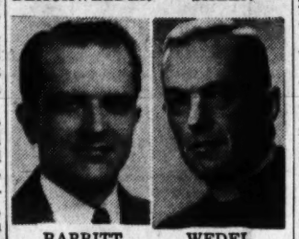
By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Citizens living under rationing of modern warfare pause today to usher in Christendom's ancient self-denial period — Lent — with traditional Ash Wednesday services in hundreds of churches.

Casholic worshipers will attend Ash Wednesday masses, where priests will finger the Cross sign on their foreheads with blessed ashes —ancient custom of that faith. Despite rationing's stringencies and other war-wrought difficulties, Lenten regulations for civilians of the Baltimore and Washington Archdiocese are essentially the same as in other years.



BLACKWELDER SHEEN



BARRITT WEDEL

Protestant faithful will bend the knee at Holy Communion and other services, several of a community and city-wide nature.

Symbolic Period

The 40-days' interval between Ash Wednesday and Easter, April 25 (Sundays are not calculated) symbolizes Christ's frequent 40-day periods of fasting and prayer, one of which was His temptation by the devil in the wilderness.

Services today at the Washington Cathedral will include Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m., celebrated by Canon Missioner Dr. Theodore O. Wedel; Litany and Penitential Office at 11 a. m.; intercessions, 12 p. m., and Evensong, 4 p. m., with Canon Chancellor, the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, officiating at the last-named service.

Presentation of three choral works by the chancel choir, directed by Theodore Schaefer, will highlight the Ash Wednesday observance at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Eighteenth and N Streets Northwest, at 8:30 p. m. George Barritt will be tenor soloist for the selection, "The Five Sayings of Jesus," by H. Walford Davies. Other numbers will be Philip James' "By the Waters of Babylon," and Charles Burke's "St. Patrick's Prayer," a fantasia on Irish hymns.

Southeast Protestant churches will start a series of daily Lenten services, Saturdays and Sundays excepted, at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue, with an Ash Wednesday program at 12 p. m. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, speaks today.

Beginning with services today at 8 p. m. at Sixth Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest, congregations of that neighborhood will sponsor programs on Wednesdays of Lent.

Dr. Harry W. Burgan, Hamline Methodist pastor, will preach tonight.

Another congregation of the upper Sixteenth Street area—Grace Lutheran—will observe Holy Communion today at 8 p. m. under the leadership of Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, with other services on subsequent Lenten Wednesdays. A group of new members will be welcomed tonight.

Reformation Lutheran

Across town, the congregation of Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street, will join in Holy Communion today at 8 p. m., with other services on subsequent Wednesdays of Lent at 8 p. m. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Washington Federation of Churches' president, is pastor.

Also of particular Lutheran interest will be the welcome of a new pastor—the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor—to the pulpit of historic Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, today at 7:30 p. m., when he will officiate at Holy Communion. He is formerly paster of Baltimore's Third Lutheran Church, and prominent in Nationwide Lutheran activities.

The Association of Universalist Women will sponsor its annual dedication service today at 7:30 p. m. at the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest.

Msgr. Sheen to Speak

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University professor, tonight at 7:30 will speak at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, Grant Circle Northwest, launching a series of Lenten lectures on 'Peaceful Thoughts in Wartime." Subsequent sermons will be heard on Lenten Tuesdays.

Chevy Chase's Protestant congregations have arranged a series of community services for Thursdays of Lent beginning tomorrow at 8 p. m., with Chevy Chase Baptist Church as opening host church, and Dr. Clifford Homer Richmond, minister of the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, as first speaker.

Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, again will sponsor a series of daily noonday Lenten services, starting today at 12 noon, when Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector, will preach. The services generally attract large numbers of downtown shoppers and business folk. The Rev. Vincent C. Franks, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Richmond, Va., is scheduled to preach tomorrow and Friday.

Federation Services

The Washington Federation of Churches, central agency of local Protestantism, will sponsor services at Epiphnay on Thursdays of Lent, beginning tomorrow, from 5:30 to 6 p. m. Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, will be the first speaker.

The city's Protestant churches are giving their hearty support to the "Our Capital for Christ" Lenten evangelistic project, sponsored by the Federation of Churches, with cooperation of the Federal Council of Churches' evangelism department, headed by Dr. Jesse M. Bader.

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will address a holy communion service today at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest. The a capella choir will sing.

Citizens Conference Backs Recreation Board 1944 Budget

The Citizens Conference of the District, joining with the Board of Recreation, approved last night, in the main, recommendations for recreation board expenditures in 1944.

Only conflict was over new residential areas in the District, which the conference felt was not being adequately cared for by the new appropriation which the Board of Recreation is asking subject to approval of the District Commissioners.

Harry Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, pointed out that much of the recently settled portion of the District is inadequately represented by playgrounds and supervised schoolyard facilities.

He said that the Budget Bureau's whittling of the Board of Recreation's estimate of $523,747 for operation of the playgrounds and pools for 1944, to $416,760 was "robbing Peter to pay Paul," and that the District didn't feel like being Peter.

West Point Cadet Dies in Air Crash; D. C. Man Injured

Highland, N. Y., March 9 (AP).—One West Point cadet was killed and another injured today when their plane crashed on a routine training flight near here.

The dead youth was Cadet H. A. Young of Long Beach, Calif. Hospitalized was Cadet R. C. Snyder, son of Brig. Gen. Howard Snyder of 2101 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Cadet Snyder, who is to graduate this semester into the Air Corps, was born in Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and has been coming to Washington for his summer vacations. General Snyder is Assistant Inspector General of the Army, and has been stationed here for about seven years.

James Montford Becomes Manager Of Press Club

The National Press Club has engaged James B. Montford, manager of the Congressional Country Club, to take over all club operations, the board of governors announced yesterday. He succeeds C. A. Alberding.

Formerly employed by the Carlton and Mayower hotels, Montford has managed the Congressional Country Club since October 1941. When the governors of that institution decided to end routine operations for the duration, Montford was approached by the Press Club officials.

Before coming to Washington Mr. Montford was with the New Albany Hotel in Denver. He is married and the father of two children.

Imitation Marriage

CHAPTER I

Scott Hayden felt his way along in the dimout, carefully stepping off curbstones, hesitantly approaching other blurred figures. It was eerie, he thought; out here in the night with the high, curving arms of the street lamps hanging down, their globes painted almost completely around so that only small, dull cones of light shone downward.

Scott stepped aside and with that motion, the girl approaching from the opposite direction moved in the same way so that they came up hard against one another.

Scott spoke the usual: "Sorry, didn't see you."

The girl's voice was breathless as though she had been running. "Please get out of the way!"

Scott took a step sideward looking down at the girl as she went past him. The only impression he received was of long, shimmering, blonde hair. He did not bother to turn because her voice had irritated him. He started away again, lifting a glance to the sky. He was in time to catch the last quarter of a full moon as it slid behind a dark, thick cloud. Even the heavens were cooperating, he thought.

For his vacation he had decided upon this small fishing town because he needed a rest; but this was not exactly a rest, it was more of a strain.

Scott came to an intersection and he glanced carefully each way before he crossed. The sidewalk curved lazily to the left here and made its way down a small hill. A street angled off sharply to the right. Scott turned his eyes to the side street and he could glimpse a long, faintly glittering stretch of water and a cluster of boats tied up close to a dock. They were silent, ghostly shapes in the night, riding the small swell that washed up against the granite ledge near the end of the dock.

Two men loomed out of the murk and Scott did not see them until they were almost upon him. They had emerged from the narrow street apparently coming from the dock. Their voices burst into his hearing suddenly. They were arguing violently.

"I tell you she came this way!" the nearer was saying, and his words had a savage intensity.

"But you do not know whether she heard——!" The hot words broke off abruptly as Scott stepped aside at the last moment to avoid colliding with them.

Scott murmured: "Sorry."

He looked up, and by a strange coincidence he saw the only two faces that he had been able to clearly make out that night. In a step he was beyond the two men, but oddly he remembered their eyes. In that quick moment the two men had searched his face so thoroughly that Scott was aware of an irritating resentment. He turned to glance back into the dimness, but they were gone. Scott shrugged, swung back into his measured stride.

He strolled a block farther and then he was at the breaking point of a line of small shops. Now the sidewalk stretched out and vanished along toward the beach. Houses stood back in the gloom, vague, shapeless hulks.

Scott stood in the murk and debated what he should do. A heavy restlessness was upon him. He looked down at his wrist to discover the time but he could not see the hands of his watch. He reached into his pocket for a match and then remembered; it wouldn't do to light a match—not now. Scott shrugged slightly, deciding then that he would like to go somewhere and look at a light—just look at it and enjoy it.

He turned and started back, this time more purposefully because he was more confident. Coming up the small hill that led to the center of the town, Scott was kept busy dodging the faint shapes that emerged before him. He stopped on a corner. To his right, music and laughter echoed from behind a screen door that had a curtain drawn over it. That was what he wanted, Scott decided. He crossed the street quickly, came up to the door and pushed hard.

The lounge was wide and long with a polished bar running the entire length of the room. The walls were bizarre with grotesque murals of men and women. On the ceiling huge electric fans whirred noisily above the steady racket of the resort people talking, drinking and laughing.

Down through a narrow doorway Scott could see part of an orchestra that was playing in the dining room. The music was surprisingly good and as he seated himself upon a high stool before the bar, Scott listened pleasurably to sweet high brass flowing smoothly, surely.

The bartender moved down and stood idly before him.

"Scotch and soda," Scott ordered, not looking up.

The man moved away and without looking plucked a bottle from the shelf before a huge mirror. He walked back and pushed the small glass before Scott Hayden.

"Shall I mix it?"

"Please." Scott looked up then because the man's voice was familiar. "Why, hello," Scott said. The bartender was Tom Cortell, the agent who had rented Scott his house.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Wanted—a whole raft of women to join the Antiaircraft Volunteers Association in the District of Columbia!

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Col. C. W. Timberlake (fifth generation West Pointer), in command of the Antiaircraft Command, promises no reward but a sylph-like figure and inner sense of serving your country. This he told members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday at luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel in an off-record talk on the Capital's defenses.

"The women now working under me have done a man-size job and have done it well," he declared. "Also, they do it much better than men. In addition, I noticed that the workers are losing vital inches around the waistline."

While the women wear blue slacks, blue jackets, relieved by a white shirt, they do not have any insignia to denote their connection with the Army Department while on duty.

Don't ask the colonel too much about this job—it's really a vital military secret. Of course, if you want to become a worker—that's another story.

Punctuated with humorous remarks that kept his listeners spellbound, Col. Timberlake let the press in on a few secrets (so we think). After pressing home the need for volunteers the colonel revealed that he approves the idea of the women workers wearing slacks. With that he sat back to listen to youthful Miss Pin Pin T'an tell how she teaches basic English over the World Wide Broadcasting Co.

Miss Pin Pin T'an—born in Peking—came to the United States a few years ago to study on a Rockefeller Scholarship. The war caught her and she remained to teach English to the world—via the radio. Since 1940 she's been concentrating on Latin America.

But perhaps basic English is a vague term to you. Well, Miss T'an describes it as a system whereby 850 words have the covering power of 20,000. Furthermore, she proved it by giving her speech in basic English.

She recalled the fact that Dr. C. K. Ogden of Cambridge, England, is the father of the basic English system. He thought it might be used as an international language.

Why not French, Russian, Spanish as the basic international language? No other language (English) has such a wide covering power with so few words, according to the pretty Chinese speaker, who learned English via the governess method back in China.

Here are a few facts about basic English: Sixteen verbs do the work of 4000 verbs. How? By combining them with directives. For example, take the word put—put aside, put away, put in, etc. General instead of specific nouns are used

Miss Christine Sadler, president of the club, presided and introduced the honored guests and speakers, among whom were Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Senator from Ohio; Mrs. Franz Stone, Lada-Mocarski, Mrs. Ruth Shipley, head of the passport section of the State Department, and Betsey Talbot Blackwell.

Men Whom Every Woman Would Like to Meet—Just Once!

By Malvina Lindsay

The one who put in the doorbell chimes that get stuck and buzz all day with a noise that drives her crazy while every electrician she calls is out or too busy to come and do anything about it.

The one who built the fireplace with the damper that won't work, and that throws soot and smoke out on her and everything else in the room when, attired in her best hostess gown, she tries to light it just as she sees her guests coming up the walk.

The one who built the house she lives in—with its sagging doors, its lock in which keys won't turn, its windows that get stuck, its furnace that sends up smoke instead of heat, its plumbing that goes on strike, and all the other handicaps that call for nonexistent plumbers, carpenters, etc.

The demonstrator who sold her the latest thing in can openers, which seemed amazingly simple in the store, but hopelessly involved with its multiple screws, levers, etc., when she tried to use it. (Oh, well, though, it won't matter a great deal now.)

The one who put the tops on glass jars of preserves in such a way that only a Hercules with a set of iron tools can remove them.

The one who makes the umbrellas that will never catch properly when closed (on a sunny day) and that never will go up without sticking (on a rainy day).

The one responsible for the new "improved" designs in typewriters, which make it increasingly difficult to put in ribbons, and which in some models require standing on one's head to do it.

The one who built the floor sweeper with the handle that is always coming off.

The plumber who in fixing the sink made one faucet to turn one way and the other so that she is always forgetting and dousing herself with either boiling or cold water.

The ones who make all the faucets that drip . . . drip . . . drip . . .

The one responsible for putting purses in handbags on strings so that you have to fish for them through a pile of junk whenever you want any change or a car token.

The one who makes bottles the irregular odd sizes that won't fit in medicine cabinets.

The one who put the jittery knobs on bureau and desk drawers.

The one who worked out the directions for "cutting on dotted line and folding flap" under, back, sideways and across simultaneously in order to open boxes of washing powder and the like.

The one who wrote the instructions on income tax blanks.

The one who thus far has failed to invent an attractive pipe container or an ash tray deep enough.

All the ones who go around saying women have no mechanical or inventive genius and that our present advanced civilization, including all our gadgets and labor-saving equipment, is due entirely to man's great creative powers.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

By Martha Ellyn

One-track minds for cooks won't prove a blessing these days. Lent begins today and that means adjustments in meal planning will be necessary in many homes. Sometimes it will be but one meal a day when meat is eaten. Fast days come along, too, when no meat dishes are served. Rationing, too, has to be considered as well as the general availablity of foods.

Appetites will come marching home regardless of fast days or rationing. But there's many a nutritious, appealing dish to cook for delicious eating. Fish can make a contribution to Lenten meals. When I checked at the market today I learned that green shrimp and fresh salmon are among those fish now available.

Fresh shrimp can be the starting point of many a delicious dish. One that I think is especially appealing is made by filling cream puff shells with shrimp a la king. Serve these puffs on your most attractive platter surrounded by fresh peas.

What to serve with this main dish? I am suggesting the following menu:

Lenten Dinner Menu

Shrimp-filled Cream Puffs with Fresh Peas
Baked Potatoes Bread
Calavo-Tomato Salad
Bread Butter or Margarine
Fresh Fruit Cup Beverage

The recipes for making the cream puff shells and shrimp filling follow:

CREAM PUFF SHELLS

Place ½ cup water, ¼ cup butter or margarine and ¼ teaspoon salt in heavy saucepan and heat.

When boiling briskly add 1 cup sifted enriched flour all at once, stirring vigorously and cook until mixture forms a smooth ball which leaves the sides of pan clean; stirring constantly. Turn into mixing bowl and beat in thoroughly 2 eggs, one at a time. Then continue beating until mixture is thick and shiny and breaks off when spoon is raised. Drop on greased baking sheet, 6 to 8 equal portions. Bake large puff shells in very hot oven, 450 degrees, for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate, 350 degrees and bake 20 to 25 minutes longer. Cut thin slice from top of each and fill with shrimp a la king mixture.

SHRIMP A LA KING

Melt 1 tablespoon butter. Add 1 cup fresh mushrooms and 1 tablespoon minced green pepper. Stir and cook for 5 minutes. Add 4 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon celery salt and few grains cayenne. Cook for 5 minutes. Add 2 cups milk slowly. Next add 2 cups cleaned shrimp and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Reheat. Serves 6.

Encore—The Shirtwaist

By Jeanne Contini

We're keeping our shirts on . . . how about you? Remember, on Monday we composed an ode to the '43 Shirt and Skirt Girl with a beautiful logical polemic on why it is this year's most exciting fashion. Well, that was just an introduction.

Today is being devoted to the distaff side of the picture . . . the soft side. You see, it isn't limited to the step-and-fetch-it part of your life. On the contrary it is the sort of costume that expresses perfectly that nice nuance of off-hand formality appropriate for post-twilight Washington. To quote our First Lady, "It's utter nonsense to ride on a trolley trailing a fish tail." Last Wednesday, with slight misgivings, we rushed from the office to the ballet having barely enough time to take the carbon off our nose. Actually we might as well have relaxed because you could count the long dresses on your fingers.

For everything from Constitution Hall to a Mayflower donut or orange snow-drift date, this leaves nothing to be desired in the way of either formality or prettiness. Here's a semisheer blouse of chiffon with a huge soft bow and pearl buttons. It's tucked not only in front but all across the back too. The double thickness of fabric due to the tucking in strategic places, eliminates that kind of naked feeling and makes the blouse much more comfortable for evening and more appropriate for afternoon. Wear it with a long or short skirt, with a tiny calot, or flowers in your hair, or in summer with a huge straw hat. Comes in sherbet colors . . . raspberry ice, lime, and vanilla . . . about $9.

The skirt is one of the most wearable to appear in a long time. It's rayon crepe, good around the clock . . . not too skittish and not too stiff. It's soft in the front, but the fullness is distributed to maintain a flat tummy; the back is also smooth. Black or navy . . . about $7.

For forther information please call NAtional 4200, Extension 324.

Faces, With Hairdos To Match

If you have a square jaw, your most becoming hairdo is definitely not one with waved bangs over your forehead. They will make your face seem more square than ever. A clean swept hairline will be prettier, with all the fluff behind your ears and along the neckline.

If you have a low forehead, you can give it height by sweeping the side hair upward and combing the front into curls. This will disguise the actual hairline at the forehead.

The fact that pompadours have been the rage for a long time doesn't mean they're for you. Not if your forehead is very high and your chin short.

Mary Haworth's Mail

To Save Money, Couple Have Lived for Two Years In Home of Husband's Mother, Whose Uncouth Habits Pain Daughter-in-Law; Should They Move?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you kindly give me the benefit of your advice in the following matter? My husband and I have been living with his mother for the past two years, the object being to save money. She is financially independent and owns her own home; and if we stay with her another year or two, we should be able to reach our "savings" goal, provided all goes well. When we first considered this arrangement, I knew it would be difficult. But I thought I could stand it for one year, at least, in order to save.

However, we have been there two years now and my husband is so anxious to continue saving that he will not hear of moving. And lately he advances the additional argument that there is no place to go, because of overcrowded conditions in wartime Washington. Therefore, I am trying to endure it until after the war, but the atmosphere makes me very nervous. The main difficulty is having a third person constantly present,—at every meal. The old lady had lived alone for years, and, although of good family and well educated, she has become careless about table manners, dress and even grammar.

Her conversation is usually boring and her presence and peculiarities have caused many quarrels between my husband and myself. Incidentally, though my relatives have plenty of faults, they observe the little amenities that are neglected in this house. Another thing that bothers me is the gloomy unattractiveness of the house. My mother-in-law insists on keeping it exactly as it always has been with the addition of many cheap knicknacks. It would be difficult to make the house uglier, as my mother-in-law has no taste and is not bothered by frayed and dirty furnishings.

Is it worthwhile to continue trying to save by this arrangement? Or should I insist on getting out? We could afford to live elsewhere, although it would mean managing carefully; and we probably couldn't save at the present time, if we were entirely on our own.

DISSATISFIED.

Selfishness Harms All When Stupidly Practiced

DEAR DISSATISFIED: The quality of selfishness, which is to say, the instinct to secure and promote personal comfort, is a characteristic common to every person born. It may be either stupidly or intelligently expressed, depending upon the inferiority or superiority of the essential makeup of the individual. When stupidly enforced, it sooner or later takes destructive toll of all concerned. Whereas, when intelligently exercised, the selfish incentive may (and usually does) add up to benefits of one kind or another, for all collaborators in a given enterprise,—and often confers lasting improvement, however slight or intangible, upon society as a whole. This is true in every field of human dealings,—in the social and affectional realm, as well as in the domain of financial, industrial and political operations. Selfishness has acquired a bad name, because in general so childishly displayed; when, properly evaluated, it is one of the most powerful potentials for good in human nature, when brought under enlightened directive control.

Now, it seems to me that in this particular episode of your "case history," you are being galled not so much by proximity to a mother-in-law whom you find odious, as by a very stupid and "whole-hog" approach to the practice of selfishness. Your "trouble" might be defined as wanting, "for nothing," far more than you are entitled to expect. On a small income, you want to enjoy the prerogatives of a materially comfortable home, while regularly saving a disproportionately large slice of earnings,—as a gratifying symbol of future satisfaction and security. Well, you are amassing the savings, prettty much at your mother-in-law's expense in several ways, so it would appear. Since the arrangement affords you a much more economical existence than you could ever duplicate on an equal scale in this community at this time, financially she is getting "the short end of the stick," if you look at the deal in a coolly business-like manner. Furthermore, in process of securing this bargain, you penalize her further by invading and, indeed, destroying the household privacy she had maintained (doubtless from preference) for many years. I suppose she made this sacrifice largely out of sentimental concern for her dependent-type son.

What of Mother-in-Law's Side of the Story?

Instead of seeing her side of the picture, however, you mull only on your various grievances against less-than-perfection. And proceed to add insult to injury, figuratively speaking, by vociferously finding fault with her disintegrating personality and her gloomy household, which reflects that lamentable state of affairs. Whereas, if you were capable of surveying the situation dispassionately, and realizing your proper relation to it, you might more judiciously congratulate yourself upon the cash advantages of the transient setup to yourself, and resolve philosophically to bear with whatever disagreeable factors are involved,—accounting them as part of the distasteful though obligatory burden you have to bear, to effect the desired savings. Indeed, if you could be completely objective, undoutbtedly you would have to admit that you are quite as much of a trial to your mother-in-law as she is to you,—a reflection which should effectively silence your criticism of her, because reminding that the deepening reservoir of exasperation is not on your side only; but on both sides. "And people in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

You would be constructively practicising selfishness in the present instance if, while deliberately saving money at your mother-in-law's expense, you likewise deliberately exerted yourself to make life more agreeable for her, during the time you share her home. By charitably condoning and cheerfully glossing over her idiosyncracies; by patiently and even sympathetically supporting her tedious meal-time conversations; by appreciatively commenting upon the comforts or conveniences of her establishment, while sensibly ignoring its gloomier features, etc., you could, if you would, afford her a solacing brand of daughterly companionship in this interval that would handsomely compensate for your essentially self-serving performance: and at the same time reward you personally with that indefinable glow of well-being that attends the knowledge of a kind deed faithfully done. As it is, however, you take the opposite and stupidly selfish tack, with the result that for sheer lack of enlightened self-management, you are now considering a "leap in the dark" that in all probability would leave you much less comfortable and even more acutely discontented.

Attitude of Fair Play Would Relax Wife's Nerves

In conclusion, these are my sentiments: I can offer no defense of your husband's shabby policy of drawing heavily on his mother's security to bulwark his bank account. I feel, indeed, that he ought to stand on his own feet and make full provision for himself, independently of her. Nevertheless, I am definitely of the opinion that if this is the best arrangement he can make at the moment, and one which has your partial approval (for financial reasons), then certainly you can make a much more satisfactory adjustment to the situation than you have yet achieved. And you can do it by recognizing and acting upon your ethical obligation to give more than money for what you are getting,—since what you are getting is worth more, in terms of dollars, than you are required to pay; and more than you could afford, on your present budget.

MRS. SIDNEY FLETCHER TALIAFERRO

Sidney Taliaferro Takes Bride In Quiet Ceremony in Baltimore

Former Resident of Washington, She Is Sister of Miss Marguerite Munn

At a quiet ceremony yesterday at noon in St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, Mrs. Helen Munn Watson of Albemarle County, Va. became the bride of Sidney Fletcher Taliaferro, prominent banker of Washington.

The Rev. Harry Doll, rector of St. Paul's, officiated, and shortly after the rites the couple left for a brief wedding trip. They will return to Washington soon to make their home at 3102 P Street.

The former Mrs. Watson is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benson Munn of Washington. Her father, a native of New Jersey and a graduate of Princeton University, lived in the West for a time and served in the Wisconsin State Legislature and as superintendent of schools. He later became a patent lawyer in Washington, where he and his family resided for several winters, spending most of the summers in their home at Rehoboth, Del., of which resort town Mr. Munn was commissioner for many years.

First Husband Was Robert E. Wayland

Mrs. Taliaferro's mother was a daughter of Leonard James Farwell, Governor of Wisconsin and United States Commissioner of Patents in the Administration of President Lincoln. Governor Farwell was in Ford's Theater at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln and was the first to notify Vice President Johnson of the tragic event.

The widow of Daniel Edward Watson of Albemarle County, the former Mrs. Watson was first married to Robert Everett Wayland of Virginia. He died in 1911, leaving her with an infant daughter. The latter was graduated from Sweet Briar College a few years ago and is now the wife of Robert E. Taylor, an attorney of Charlottesville, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have two small sons.

Mrs. Taliaferro was educated in Washington and at a private school in Montclair, N. J. She also attended Columbia University. She is the sister of Miss Marguerite C. Munn, head of the art department of Mount Vernon Seminary and widely known in art circles throughout Washington.

Is Member of Farmington Club

For many years the former Mrs. Watson owned and operated a fruit farm in Albemarle County. She is a member of the D. A. R., the National Federation of Women's Clubs, the Red Cross board of Albemarle County and the Farmington Country Club.

Mr. Taliaferro is the son of the late Van and Sallie Pendleton Taliaferro of Virginia. His first wife, the late Elizabeth Fulton of Glasgow, Scotland, died in 1938.

Mr. Taliaferro, who is now vice president and trust officer of the Riggs National Bank of Washington, practiced law here for several years prior to 1926, when he was appointed by President Coolidge as Commissioner of the District of Columbia, an office in which he served for more than three years. He is a former member of the Public Utilities Commission, the Zoning Commission and the Board of Public Welfare of the District. A graduate of Georgetown University, he is a member of the Chevy Chase Club, the Cosmos Club and the Lawyers Club of Washington.

English Girl Betrothed to William Moore

Sir Clive and the Hon. Lady Morrison-Bell of London announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Shelagh Morrison-Bell, and William Cooper Moore.

Miss Morrison-Bell attended school in England and spent a year traveling in Europe. Later she studied music in Vienna. She is now in Washington, where she is secretary to A. D. Marris, Counselor of the British Embassy.

Mr. Moore is the son of Mrs. William A. Moore of New Rochelle, N. Y. He was graduated from Hotchkiss School, Yale and Harvard Law School, and is a member of the bar. At present he is liaison officer in the Office of Lend-Lease Administration in Washington.

Mrs. Richberg Fetes Mrs. Henry F. Grady At Luncheon

Recipient of more parties than a bride-elect is Mrs. Henry F. Grady of San Francisco, who is in Washington for an indefinite stay and is being entertained by her many friends at an endless round of luncheons, teas and dinners.

On her calendar yesterday was the luncheon at which Mrs. Donald Richberg was hostess at La Salle duBois. Among those present were Mrs. William Stanley, who entertained at a luncheon on Sunday in honor of Mrs. Grady; Miss Mary V. Johnson of New York, who came to Washington especially for the Thurman Arnold testimonial dinner last night; Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, who recently returned from California; Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller and Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

Brides-to-Be

Two weddings to take place on March 14 are those of Miss Winifred Pauline Marshall to Sergt. Martin M. Richter, jr., and Miss Esther Rubin to Herbert Goodman.

Miss Marshall, daughter of Lieut. Carl E. Bankson, U. S. N., and Mrs. Bankson, formerly of New Orleans, attended school in New Orleans and is now employed by the U. S. Army Ferry Command here. Sergeant Richter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin M. Richter of Flushing, N. Y., was formerly connected with American Airlines and will soon enter the Officers' Training School of the U. S. Army Ferry Command. The wedding will take place in Jamaica, N. Y.

Vice President, Mrs. Wallace, Honor Guests

A pleasant prelude to Vice President Wallace's forthcoming South American trip was the cocktail party given yesterday by the Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla, with Mrs. Wallace sharing honors with her husband.

The Vice President will leave March 22 for a tour of several South American countries with a visit to Bolivia on his itinerary. He will also go to Costa Rica to attend the opening of the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences.

The fete yesterday was accented by informality. In the company of about 100 were the chiefs of mission of the Latin-American countries and their wives and a group from official circles.

For many guests it was the first opportunity to see the new embassy recently purchased by the Bolivian Government from Senator James J. Davis. The furnishings are now complete and everything is in readiness for the visit of the Bolivian President, Dr. Enrique Penaranda, in April.

New Superintendent of Army Nurses Believes in Equality

Lieut. Col. Florence A. Blanchfield Has Been Influence in the Corps Since 1917

By Peggy Preston

She is a mild-mannered lieutenant colonel, but her record shows a courage of her own convictions that goes with those silver leaves on her shoulders.

Lieut. Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, Superintendent of the Army Nurses Corps, has been holding down the administrative job as head of the corps for the past few months, but her influence in the practical achievement of this branch of the service has been felt for many years past.

The small-statured, quiet-speaking colonel has never been one to pull her punches. Since coming to the corps in 1917, she has believed firmly in equality of rank for Army nurses and to that end she has bent her every effort.

"There was a day when we were neither fish or fowl," she said the other day in the Office of the Surgeon General, where she and her staff oversee the world-wide doings of the corps. "Many years ago I knew that we must have equal rank and all that goes with it, or else we should be out of the army altogether. Today, with equal rank I think the corps is showing its worth."

Knows the Personnel Of Her Corps

Perhaps Colonel Blanchfield's chief worth to the corps right now is her knowledge of its personnel and the job the corps has to do. Having served in the Office of the Surgeon General since 1935 and prior to that in the field for some 15 years, there is little of the working details that she does not know.

Interested in people and places, she has at the tip of her fingers data and information on every key executive officer in her corps. When a memo comes in from Iceland, with reference to some problem of material or personnel, Colonel Blanchfield needs no filing cabinet to help check the report. She knows at once whether the executive officer in charge is handling the situation correctly, and exactly what aid from the central office is required.

Likewise her knowledge of the executive office here in Washington is complete, and a long-standing acquaintance with the requirements of the Army Medical Corps permits her to accomplish much within a minimum length of time.

Streamlined the Officers' Uniforms

The two current projects that occupy most of her time are the writing of a new manual for the corps and the completion of a practical set of uniforms for her officers.

With characteristic thoroughness, Colonel Blanchfield, some time ago, set to work to provide uniform dress for the nurses—uniforms that would carry them through service in the Tropics and the Arctic with as little change as possible.

"We found the best designer we could," she said. "Gave her the job to do and today instead of having blues and whites with all the changes of accessories that go with them, we have a two-toned brown cotton and an olive drab with identical accessories. We've streamlined for overseas service and are saving luggage space and laundry bills."

Born in Shepherdstown, W. Va., Colonel Blanchfield entered the nursing profession in 1906 and did civilian work for 10 years. Well versed in all the branches of nursing, her work has taken her to Panama, to the Philippines, to France and to China.

Here in Washington she lives quietly in an apartment, having given up her suburban house and garden for the duration. Fond of travel and outdoor life, she has had little time for such of late. Up each morning at 6:30, she is at her desk early and for six days a week remains there until after 6 at night.

This year she celebrates a quarter of a century of service with the Army and in her opinion her work has just begun.

Chile's Army Chief To Be Feted

Gen. Arturo Espinosa, chief of the Chilean delegation to the Inter-American Defense Board, and Senora de Espinosa, will entertain at a reception Saturday afternoon at the Shoreham in honor of Gen. Oscar Escudero, commander in chief of the Chilean army, and Col. Milciades Contreras, who are due to arrive in Miami, Fla., today by plane from Chile. General Escudero is coming to Washington to discuss the new United States-Chile lend-lease agreement with General Marshall, chief of staff.

Col. Guillermo Lopez-Larrain, Military Attache of the Chilean Embassy, is in Miami to meet his countrymen.

Washington Wonders Whether Gauss Is to Be Replaced As Envoy to China; His Imminent Return, Announced Just After Mme. Chiang's Visit, Seems More Than Coincidence

What about Clarence Gauss, U. S. Ambassador to China? Is he on his way home only for "consultation" or is this step the first in a series that will soon see his successor in our Embassy at Chungking?

Whether it is true that China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is highly desirous of having Gauss replaced is still a matter of speculation. In view of rumors that have rippled freely to that effect over Capital teacups and desktops, however, it would seem more than mere coincidence that the American envoy's imminent return to Washington hit the headlines only a few days after Mme. Chiang concluded her visit at the White House. Whispered reports have it that China's First Lady, the visitor, told the President that if he couldn't promise more munitions at this time he could oil the troubled diplomatic waters by sending a new Ambassador to China.

CLARENCE EDWARD GAUSS

A few months ago, when popular Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, was replaced by Dr. Wei Tao-ming, the only way most Capitalites could explain the shift was that China's generalissimo took that means of indicating to Washington that a similar procedure would be welcome in Chungking.

Two Cases Very Similar

At the time Dr. Hu bowed politely out of the diplomatic picture, more than one old-timer in the State Department mentioned that the former envoy's situation in Washington had been very much like that of Gauss in Chungking. For example, during the time when Dr. Hu would normally have been handling Chinese affairs in Washington, China's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. T. V. Soong (brother of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek) had been taking over most of them. For almost a year before he left, Dr. Hu was charged with little more than the usual routine teacup diplomacy.

In Chungking, during virtually the same time, Gauss saw duties he had assumed were his as United States Ambassador turned over to other individuals whose ability could not be questioned. Military negotiations between America and China were handled—and very well handled, too—by Gen. Joseph Stilwell, chief of staff in the China war theater under Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and commander of United States forces in China, India and Burma. A poster painter's soldier, General Stilwell is a tall, lean and weather-beaten man—the hard-hitting, outdoor type of man, who loves the field and from a military point of view knows what he is about. It was only natural that this man of war should choose to deal directly with China's No. 1 man of war . . . without having their conferences cleared through the Ambassador's office.

Also to China several times has gone Lauchlin Currie, White House secretary, who as a special envoy from the President was welcomed on arrival by Generalissimo Chiang. Owen Lattimore, who was doing yeoman service to help raise standards of living for the Chinese people, is another who has unconsciously assumed many diplomatic duties that normally would fall to an American envoy in Chungking.

"Trouble about Gauss is simply this: He's a quiet, efficient man, who does his duty with a minimum of fanfare and simply declines to put up a fight for his rights," one of his friends told me yesterday. "If he had put down a firm foot about having all American-Chinese relationships cleared through his office, he could have managed all right, and the Chinese would have been as happy about it as they'll be about any American Ambassador who can't see to it that they get what they need in the way of munitions. But Gauss won't do that; furthermore, he hasn't any particular desire to stay in China anyway, and he hasn't been too diplomatic in letting that fact be known. So, there's more than an even chance he won't be going back to Chungking."

Dr. Hu Shih a Wise Diplomat

Obviously, Gauss didn't handle the matter of receding power as gracefully as did Dr. Hu. The latter wasted no time in bemoaning the fate that had shunted his diplomatic power into other channels. Wise man that he was (and is), he set out to make friends for China throughout the country; traveled far and wide, lecturing at every important college in the land and accepting more honorary degrees than have been handed out to any foreign ambassador in America's history. Gauss, on the other hand, has merely become more and more insistent that he be either transferred to another post or given more actual diplomatic affairs to negotiate. At the same time, reports have gained wide currency that Generalissimo Chiang wants him replaced at once, and that neither General Stilwell nor General Chennault have seen fit to defend his position.

Made Enviable Record at Shanghai

Well, it looks as if Gauss is on his way out of China in more ways than one; but you can count on one thing—if he is, he'll get another good post, and probably one that will please him a lot more than the one at Chungking. Despite the fact that he hasn't been highly popular in China on this tour of duty, the fact remains that he has an enviable record in diplomatic service, and that he has long been regarded as one of the hardest working and most efficient officers in that contingent. To prove it, there's the record on that stretch of stern duty back from 1935 to 1940 when as American Consul General at Shanghai he negotiated his country's affairs and looked after Americans abroad while hostilities ranged in the immediate vicinity of his office. His large staff in Shanghai—one of the most efficient in the service—was unanimous in its respect for his judgment and his foresight, and with that staff, as well as with the one he headed as first American Minister to Australia, and later with the one of which he has been in charge at Chungking, he is immensely popular.

With a special glow of pride, "old" Washington has long followed Gauss' career. He was born on Capitol Hill, and his father, Herman Gauss, who died in 1933, was employed in the Pension Office for more than 45 years. Gauss himself served as stenographer for the House Invalid Pensions Committee for a time and was clerk in a law office later. Then, while holding down a $900-a-year clerkship in the State Department in 1906, he qualified for the consular service by studying languages from private tutors . . . and was soon on his diplomatic way.

Friends Pay Tribute to Justice Arnold

An impressive tribute to Thurman Arnold was the testimonial dinner at the Statler last evening, when more than 600 friends turned out to do him homage, just as he bows out of his ticklish job as Assistant Attorney General to don the robes of an Associate Justice in the Court of Appeals.

Celebrities—particularly of the judicial and legislative variety—were so numerous that heads soon stopped turning as they made their way through the crowd in the Presidential Room. Oral tributes were on every tongue for the man who has made scores of friends by being so proud of his enemies.

Speaker Rayburn On the Program

There to watch personage after personage make a vocal toast to the mercurial antitrust leader were Mrs. Arnold, wreathed in proud smiles, and their son, Lieut. (j. g.) George Arnold, U. S. N. R.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney enjoyed his role of master of ceremonies as speaker after speaker sought to outdo each other in praise of the fighting Assistant Attorney General. Attorney General Francis Biddle was the first to pay tribute to his able assistant and then House Speaker Sam Rayburn arose to his oratorical heights on the subject of Mr. Arnold. In rapid speaking succession came House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., Justice William O. Douglas, Arthur Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet; Senator Robert LaFollette, Senator Alben Barkley and production wizard, Henry J. Kaiser.

Tom C. Clark, first assistant to Mr. Arnold, and his logical successor, rose to make a presentation of judicial robes and a pair of Sheffield silver decanters. Then came the piece de resistance, a speech by the guest of honor radioed out over a national hook-up.

Makes History On Many Accounts

Senator O'Mahoney kept an eye on the distinguished gathering and from time to time would call on members of the group to say a few words. Among those he singled out were Justice Hugo Black, Justice Robert Jackson, Senator Harry Truman, Representative Louis Rabaut and Undersecretary of the Interior Abe Fortis.

Musical offerings added gaiety to the gathering, which included in its distinguished midst a large representation from Capitol Hill, the Supreme Court, the Circuit Court of Appeals, all branches of officialdom and residential Washington.

Nobody could remember when the Capital had seen a fete to match this one, and it will be a long time before there is such another, for today the ban on banqueting goes on and testimonials are out for the duration.

Jean Cattier and Bride To Live in Washington

Marriage Ceremony Takes Place in Holy Trinity Church; Reception Later

Miss Carlota Andrea Zimmerman of Caracas, Venezuela, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Enrique Zimmerman of Montevideo, Uruguay, was married Saturday afternoon in the Holy Trinity Church in Washington to Jean Cattier, U. S. A., formerly of Locust Valley, Long Island, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felicien Cattier of Brussels, Belgium. The Rev. Laurence J. Kelly officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception at the Carlton Hotel given by the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Meyer of New York, with whom she has been making her home.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Meyer. She wore a gown of white crepe made on princess line with a V-neckline and long tight sleeves. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of tulle, and she carried a bouquet of white pansies, orchids, spray orchids and lilac.

Mrs. John Cassidy of New York, the former Miss Queta Zimmerman, was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a gown of salmon pink chiffon with a sweetheart neckline, a wreath of blue and pink sweet peas which held a brown veil, and carried a bouquet of blue and pink sweet peas. Miss Georgette Meyer, the bride's cousin, was maid of honor and wore a gown similar to that of the matron of honor in blue chiffon, with a wreath of blue and pink sweet peas and matching bouquet.

Pierre P. Cattier of London was best man for his brother. Ushers were Col. Luis Francke, U. S. A., and Julio Herrera of Mill Neck, N. J.

The young couple will make their home in Washington. The bride was graduated from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, in New York, and attended Mrs. Rennie-O'Manny's School and Miss Farr's School in London. Mr. Cattier was graduated from the University of Brussels and was formerly a partner in the brokerage firm of White, Weld & Co. At present he is enrolled in the Officers Training School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Teague—Abbott

Announcement has been made by Mrs. David Hoadley Munroe of Washington, formerely of New York, of the marriage of her daughter, Miss Mary Lee Abbott, to Aviation Cadet R. Lewis Teague, U. S. A., on Tuesday, March 2, in King City, Calif. The bridegroom is the son of Darwin Teague, artist and author.

The bride is the daughter of Comdr. Henry Livermore Abbott, Naval Intelligence. She was graduated from Miss Chapin's School in New York and was introduced to society in 1940 at a reception at the Colony Club. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Morton Grinnell of New York and a niece of Mrs. George Morton Grinnell.

Capt. Eloy Alfaro Entertains for Dr. F. N. Allende

The Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, entertained at a men's dinner last evening at the Mayflower in honor of Dr. Fausto Navarro Allende, vice president of the Ecuadorian Senate. The dinner had been postponed from an earlier date owing to the illness of Dr. Allende.

The Ecuadorian Embassy staff has as a new member Capt. Luis Pineiros, Assistant Military Attache, who arrived in Washington on Sunday from Ecuador, accompanied by Senora de Pineiros. They are stopping at the Lafayette.

In New York

Mrs. Thomas Leiter has gone to New York to join her mother, Mrs. Philip G. Gossler, at the Plaza.

Purely Personal

The Vice President, Henry A. Wallace, returned to the Capital yesterday from Delaware, Ohio, where he went to deliver a speech.

The Yugoslav Charge d'Affaires and Mme. Vladimir Rybar will be guests of honor at a tea to be given by Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas on Sunday.

Col. Charles Luguet, the Representative of the Fighting French Air Force in Washington, and Mrs. Luguet have issued invitations for a cocktail party this afternoon in honor of Commandant B. Duperier, commanding the Free French Squadron, Ile de France. The fete will take place from 5:30 to 7:30 in the banquet room of the Carlton.

Mrs. Henry F. Grady will be the guest of honor when Mrs. James Brent Clarke is hostess at tea on Wednesday, March 16, in her apartment at the Cordova.

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould has cards out for a tea on Sunday from 5 to 7 o'clock, in honor of Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw. The fete will take place in Mrs. Gould's home at 3120 Woodland Drive.

The Playwrights' Company Rates a Bit of a Salute

For Second Time, Has Three Hits on Broadway; 'Greatest War Film' on Way From England; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IN HIS LATEST BULLETIN, William Fields, the veteran stentor who enthusiastically cries the wares of the Playwrights' Company, suggests that a salute to that distinguished organization would seem to be in order. The suggestion is both a sound and a timely one.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD

For the second time in the brief five years of its existence, the Playwrights' Company has three important hit plays running simultaneously on Broadway—Maxwell Anderson's "The Eve of St. Mark," which Washington has seen professionally produced only on the occasion of the President's birthday "command performance;" S. H. Behrman's "The Pirate," in which Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne were seen at the National prior to the New York opening, and Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," for which, no doubt, the Capital will have to wait for endless months.

It was in the season of 1938-39, its first, that the Playwrights' Company earlier enjoyed the distinction of three Broadway hits running at the same time, out of a total number of four productions for the year. Those three were Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," starring Raymond Massey; the Anderson-Kurt Weill musical fantasy, "Knickerbocker Holiday," with Walter Huston as star, and Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," with Katharine Cornell in the stellar role. The fourth play of that season was Elmer Rice's "American Landscape," which met with high praise, but was not a financial success.

It is characteristic of the Playwrights' Company, that no tawdry theatrical property ever has flown its banner. Its record may not be one of an unbroken succession of sure-fire, smash hits, but it most emphatically is one of sound, worthy and generally rewarded efforts to supply the stage with works in the highest traditions of the theater.

So, Bill, here is your salute.

It is, of course, a fruitful augury for the future that the personnel of the Playwrights' Company, except for the loss of one of its members, continues to embrace the group of distinguished dramatists who originally organized it. With the single exception of Sidney Howard, who met an untimely death in a tractor accident on his farm early in the company's history, the ownership-management includes Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Elmer Rice and Robert E. Sherwood, authors to whom Pulitzer Prizes and others of the theater's highest honors are by no means unknown.

Those Prints Are on the Way

Comes word from Mr. G. St. G. Walker of the British Information Services in Washington that negatives and prints of the new film, "Desert Victory," made under fire on the actual battlefield and showing the Eighth Army's smashing victory at El Alamein and its triumphant advance across the desert to Tripoli, are being rushed to the United States by air and will be released to American audiences in the near future. This is the item heralded here some weeks ago as the picture produced by the British army film photographic unit and the Royal Air Force film production unit, in which the "actors" are the officers and men of the Eighth Army, the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force. Its "sets" are the desert battlefields, from 60 miles west of Alexandria, through 1200 miles of fighting to the streets of Tripoli. It has been hailed by those who have viewed it on the other side as "the greatest film of the war." It has been eagerly awaited here as the picture that well might be precisely that.

In the meantime, however, Director Jack Winocour of the B. I. S., drops word that on Friday at 4 p. m., in the National Press Building, his office will be previewing three British-made short films that should prove of equal interest to American audiences at this time. "All Hands" and "Dangerous Comment" are designed to remind the public of the dangers of careless talk, and "Partners in Crime" is a parable for people who patronize the Black Market.

It was a pleasure yesterday to greet again, after the passage of too many years, our old friend, Howard Herrick, one of the ablest of the theater's veteran publicists. Mr. Herrick is in town rustling his papers against the coming of the Fortune Gallo Opera Company to the National the week of March 24.

From a full and heavy heart, my deep gratitude to all the kindly and thoughtful friends, whose comfort in an hour of great need can never be repaid.

After the Ball Is Over!

Hollywood, Calif., March 9.—The Academy dinner is over, and we've taken in the red carpet. Awards went to the right people. My predictions were wrong on two counts: supporting players Teresa Wright and Van Heflin. Van, at the end of his speech, made a rather nostlagic remark. He thanked the theater for giving him his training. Jimmy Cagney also brought the theater very close to you in his dignified and sincere cpeech . . . But "that dream man," as Cornelia Otis Skinner calls him, Bob Hope, was the life-saver of the evening. No wonder they named him Hope. He never fails . . . Louis B. Mayer made the prediction of the evening when he said his son-in-law, Bill Goetz, is going to be "a greater man than I am."

TERESA WRIGHT

There was something so naive and fresh about that. Reminded me of what he said to the actors when he cut our salaries 50 per cent and ended up by remarking he'd saved a few pennies . . . Willie Wyler would have been proud of his wife—her sincerity and charm while receiving his award.

It's a Date!

Ginger Rogers came looking like a star—dressed in gold lame, with tiny orchids in her hair to match. Buddy De Sylva leaned across the table and said, "What are you doing a year from tonight, Ginger?" "Nothing." "Oh, yes, you are. You're coming to the award banquet on my arm to get the Oscar for your performance in 'Lady in the Dark.'" Rather cute, what? . . . Dorothy Lamour radiant as usual. . . . Harry Warner leaned over and whispered, "Don't you think we should give a special award for the happiest married couple?" "Only if we win it, Harry," quipped his wife. . . . Frank Freeman, as he left the stand, smiled and said, "I make my speeches short. They may not be sweet, but they're short."

Ida Makes Sense

Billy Menzies, who did all the drawings of every scene, including closeups, for "Our Town," "King's Row," and "For Whom the Bell Tolls," is now coproducer on "North Star." Naturally, he's done all the sketches on that and started something new. Because the women are mostly peasants and wear rough clothes which have to be picturesque, he engaged Denney Winters, painter, and Milly Racque, illustrator, to do the costumes. They're doing such an outstanding job that when this is finished other studios will be copying Billy's innovation for this type of picture.

Say It With Music

Johnny Green says that next to his daughter, Barbara, Ginger Rogers has the greatest sense of rhythm of any girl he's come across . . . and speaking of that, Harold Spina's score for "The Stovepipe Hat," which many heard here, had to go to New York for recognition. He played it there before a group of friends and after the audition $100,000 was subscribed to back the show. John Wilson, who produced "Blithe Spirit," will coproduce it with Ray Golden. Carl Sandburg, authority on Lincoln, is quoted as saying that "Stovepipe Hat" is a play Lincoln himself would have loved . . . and that reminds me that from a New Yorker I had news that Phil Ohman's "Cinderalla Suite" has been bought by Walt Disney, who will weave a fantasy around the music as soon as war duties let up. That is great news for us who have heard Phil play it. We've been raving about it.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, March 9.

At the Motion Picture Academy dinner in Hollywood last week an Academy Award was presented to Michael Kanin for having coauthored the best screen play of 1942—Katharine Hepburn's "Woman of the Year." This is how Mike Kanin became a writer: He was a promising painter and had studied in the art schools of France and Italy. Then one day while he was painting some sets backstage at a Broadway theater a piece of scenery fell on his head. His sight was impaired forever. He no longer could do any painting . . . His brother, Garson Kanin, then a young stage director, was signed by Goldwyn, and moved his parents to Hollywood. Mike was determined to join them there. He became a writer, finished a play that summer, and John Golden bought it. As a result, RKO signed Mike Kanin as a writer of B pictures.

KATHARINE HEPBURN

In the meantime his brother had become one of Hollywood's wonder boys. Garson had directed "A Man to Remember" and "The Great Man Votes" for R. K. O., and received wide acclaim. The studio then assigned Garson to direct a B picture written by his brother Mike. Garson objected, and Mike agreed with him. R. K. O. therefore suspended the director. His brother decided to become a free-lance scenarist . . . With Ring Lardner, jr., Mike wrote "Woman of the Year." Garson brought this script to Katharine Hepburn, who induced M. G. M. to buy it for her. Each of the writers received $50,000—and now each has an Academy Award.

Thursday night George Atwell, sr., the socialite industrialist who did the construction work at Rockefeller Center, had as his dinner guest Father Hyland, the priest at Dannemora Prison . . . "Crime is a terrible thing," Atwell sighed. "It ruined the best secretary I ever had. He was sent to Dannemora on a narcotics charge. And he was such a wonderful secretary" . . . "Not 'was.' He still is," Father Hyland corrected. "Because he's been my secretary for years."

The newest war correspondent to rush into print with a book is Pat Robinson, who returned from New Guinea this week and will report his story for Random House in a book which will be subtitled "MacArthur's First Offensive" . . . Vernon Pope, who was editor of Look magazine, will be the editor of Sherman Billingsley's "Stork Club Talk" . . . One of the world's greatest designers, who recently was estranged from a lady who was his friend for years, is bewildered by her odd revenge. She's opened a rival office, and so far has signed three members of his staff—including his head designer . . . Michael Todd's contract to take control of the Broadway Theater was signed a week ago.

Paul Winkler, author of "The Thousand-Year Conspiracy" and one of Europe's foremost newspaper syndicate men, tells of a day in Munich in December, 1919, when he met a hypnotist-mystic, named Hunnesen, who insisted that he could teach anyone how to transfix an entire audience. "First you begin by shouting at them—then more shouting, shouting, shouting," Hunnesen told Winkler. "Come with me. I will show you one of my pupils, Adolf Hitler" . . . There was an audience of 60 listening to Hitler that night. He held them spellbound . . . "And six days after Hitler came to power," Winkler reports, "Hunnesen was killed."

Pearl Harbor Launched Career

Besides all the other things it did, Pearl Harbor made Leonard Strong a movie actor.

Utah born, a stock company and radio actor for 20-odd years, ever since high school days, Strong yearned for a movie career but never got an opening until Jap treachery loosed the current trend of Pacific war dramas.

Then, due to his short stature and the coloring derived from French and Welsh descent, he was drafted to play a movie Jap—all Jap actors being interned.

He's been in seven pictures since, all Jap roles. Today, in his most important, he is playing a Jap intelligence officer in RKO Radio's "Bombardier."

"AIR FORCE." The battling bomber "Mary Ann" continues her distinguished career in the skies unabated. Spewing death from all sides, her flight from San Francisco to Pearl Harbor, Wake, Manila and eventually Tokyo,, is one long succession of disasters to the enemy forces. John Garfield, Harry Carey, John Ridgely and Gig Young head the cast. Paul Remos and his Toy Boys, and Bob Hall are fetaured on the Earle Theater stage. Held over.

RKO-Keith's

"SHADOW OF A DOUBT." Fear and suspicion, in the best Alfred Hitchcock manner, enter into the home of a normal, middle-class American family. A warped mind set loose in a typical Midwestern small town sets the scene for the screen play by Thornton Wilder. Joseph Cotten and Teresa Wright are the principal players,

Capitol

"THE CRYSTAL BALL." The daffy adventures which pursue Ray Milland in the romantic comedy, which costars Paulette Goddard, are not reserved for believers of the spirit world alone. As a matter of fact, most of the events are due to the very material figure of Miss Goddard whose prophesies have little to do with the stars and their position. Virginia Field, Gladys George, Cecil Kellaway and William Bendix are prominent. Opens Thursday.

Palace

"RANDOM HARVEST." Greer Garson, this year's Academy Award winner for the best feminine performance, is costarred with Ronald Colman in the screen version of James Hilton's best seller. The story deals with a victim of amnesia who loses the happiest period of his life and then, after many years, regains it.

Metropolitan

"YANKEE DOODLE DANDY." James Cagney, voted the best male actor of the year for this performance, portrays George M. Cohan in this film biography based on the life of the beloved actor and composer. His best-known songs are highlighted throughout, in addition to the big moments of his career. Joan Leslie, Walter Huston, Jeanne Cagney and Rosemary De Camp are importantly featured. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD," Jack Benny, no less, takes up his stand a little farther down on F Street. It's all in fun though, and just goes to show the trials and tribulations of practicing law in an overcrowded field. Rochester appears with his radio boss in the usual role, and Priscilla Lane is the small-town girl who serves as our hero's inspiration.

Little

"OUR TOWN." The screen version of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play is revived with Martha Scott and William Holden in the central roles. Frank Craven reappears as the narrator of the happenings in rural America during the horse-and-buggy days. Thomas Mitchell, Fay Bainter, Beulah Bondi and Stuart Erwin are among the supporting players. Opens Wednesday.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE," with guest expert Howard Lindsay, is the featured short subject. "Cruise Sports," devoted to the games that are played on ocean liners; "Troop Train," a Government documentary, and "Spinach for Britain," with Popeye the Sailor, complete this section of the program.

Pix

"BRINGING UP BABY." The Katharine Hepburn-Cary Grant opus about a dizzy heiress who adopts a leopard for a pet is revived. Sophisticated comedy is replaced by pure slapstick as Miss Hepburn goes into contortions to land Cary Grant, who relies on horn-rimmed glasses and a serious manner to win laughs. Opens Saturday.

Gayety

DARLENE is the featured female performer of the new show, while comedians Collins and Peterson play a return engagement.

Ambulance Report Ready; Cites Delays

Data pointing to unnecessary delays in the dispatch of ambulances of hospitals contracting with the District for such service, are included in a report to be sent to the District Commissioners today by Police Chief Edward J. Kelly, it was learned by The Post last night.

The report was based on an investigation by Police Inspector Arthur E. Miller, following recent delays of ambulances in accident calls. Besides the implications of delay in leaving their institutions, it contained several recommendations for improvement of such service.

In the meantime, it was revealed the Commissioners are preparing for a conference soon of police, fire, hospital, medical, health and other interested parties to discuss ways of expediting ambulance service.

It is expected the conference will consider the centralized dispatcher system which will route all ambulance calls through one bureau. The dispatcher, one with a medical background, would decide the degree of necessity in each case.

Major Kelly said he thought the system "an excellent idea." "All calls ought to go through one place so that some one is responsible," he declared.

District cab drivers were asked last night to cooperate with hospitals in improving cab service for incoming and outgoing patients, Public Utilities Chairman James H. Flanagan announced.

Stating that his attention had been called to the difficulty with which hospitals obtained cab service, and that on occasions no response at all is made to urgent telephone calls, Flanagan requested the presidents of all cab associations to "solve the problem promptly and satisfactorily."

"I suggest that you inform the officials of each hospital in the District how they may be sure of a prompt response if they call upon your association for taxicab service of a vital nature," said Flanagan, adding a request for copies of such notices.

Morris 1st to Get Purple Heart in Coast Guard

The Navy announced yesterday award of the Purple Heart, traditionally an Army decoration, to a Coast Guardsman for the first time in a century and a half of Coast Guard history.

The recipient was Chief Boatswain's Mate Lloyd M. Morris of Vallejo, Calif., who was wounded in landing operations in Africa.

Asthma Mucus Loosened For Thousands By 1st Dose of Mendaco

If you suffer from choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, here is good news for you. A prescription called Mendaco perfected by a physician in his private practice contains ingredients which start circulating thru the blood within a very short time after the first dose, thus reaching the congested Bronchial tubes where it usually quickly helps liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. Fortunately Mendaco has now been made available to sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma thru all drug stores and has proved so helpful to so many thousands it is offered under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. You have everything to gain, so get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c. The guaranteed trial offer protects you.

Singing of Kenneth Spencer Has Most Promising Quality

By Ray C. B. Brown

Howard University School of Music presents Kenneth Spencer in a song recital on Tuesday night in Andrew Rankin Chapel. Accompanist: Jonathan Brice. Program of arias by Bach and Handel, songs by Secchi, Respighi, Debussy, Fourdrain, Rakhmaninov, Austin, Cohen and Head, and spirituals arranged by Johnson, Jessye, Burleigh and Still.

Appearing in the Howard University concert series last evening, Kenneth Spencer deserved a larger audience than the one assembled in Andrew Rankin Chapel, for this young colored basso possesses a natural musicianship and a vocal equipment that should win him distinction. His artistry is still in the formative stage, richer in potentialities than in accomplishment, and his singing has a most promising quality. Powerful and resonant when fully released, his voice is firmly supported on the breath and steady in tone, expressive in phrasing and remarkably plastic for so heavy a timbre. This plasticity was evident at the outset in his readings of "Es ist vollbract" from Bach's Church Cantata No. 159, and Handel's "Si tra i ceppi" from "Atalanta."

BROWN

In these arias he disclosed a vibrancy of tone that he should use oftener because of its vigor. For the most part, he repressed the volume of his voice and maintained a medium utterance that was not to his advantage. He has not yet developed a mezza-voce intonation which is essential for many of the songs he selected, and the mere softening of the tone resulted in a certain amount of lyric monotony. There was very little discrimination, for example, between Brahms' "O wuesst' ich doch den Weg zurueck," Schubert's "Der Jungling an die Quelle" and Wolf's "Verborgenheit."

When he let himself go in Fourdrain's "Promenade a mule" and Wolf's "Der Tambour," he revealed an engaging vitality of tone and an effective dramatic accent. Respighi's "Nebbie" was delivered with impressive style and somber coloring, but Debussy's "Beau soir" was disappointing because this lovely song lost its magical atmosphere by being transposed to so low a key.

His group of lyrics in English had more freedom and flexibility, as though he had discarded a self-imposed formality. There was much to enjoy in his readings of Rakhmaninov's "In the Silence of Night," Austin's "Ballynure Ballad," Cecil Cohen's "Death of an Old Seaman" and Head's "When I Think Upon the Maidens." Here he was at his ease in emotional variety, with no inhibitions as to romantic passion, humor, pathetic stress and imaginative interpretation.

Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Warworkers Facing Eviction To Petition 1st Lady, Congress

One hundred and ninety warworkers about to be evicted from Belmont Gardens, boarding house at 1759 R Street Northwest, will petition every Congressman and Mrs. Roosevelt this week to find some means of preventing their spending every Sunday tramping the streets looking for a place to sleep.

Take the case of Miss Lydia Carroll, one of the few tenants of the establishment not in Government service. Miss Carroll came here from South Carolina to do work for the armed forces with the American Red Cross.

Faced with the agonizing prospect of finding a room again because Mrs. Frederick Sterling, boarding house owner, has decided to close her establishment, Miss Carroll is considering a return to South Carolina.

"I am right proud of working for the American Red Cross," asserted Miss Carroll yesterday. "I just love Washington and I love my job. I feel as if I am doing something for the war effort, but I don't think I'll be unpatriotic if I just pack up and go home and do war work. I just can't face looking for another room.

The petition which the tenants will present will not ask the Government to set aside a recent decision by the District Rent Control Commission that Mrs. terling is entitled to withdraw from the boarding-house business which she claims to be operating at a loss.

What the tenants are asking is that some provision be made to house them. They want either assurance of priorities on Government war housing here, or they want the Government to make some attempt, through the National Housing Authority, to see that Belmont Gardens is kept in operation.

A spokesman for the National Housing Authority said last night that with all the tenants who are warworkers become eligible for war housing here by virtue of being evicted, it was most unlikely priorities could be granted since there were thousands of other applicants who needed a place to sleep, too.

As for Government operation of Belmont Gardens, the spokesman said, proceedure would be very difficult. Mrs. Sterling, or those acting for her, would have to apply to the Government to take over the property under the Homes Use program. Unless the Congress should specifically direct a housing agency to requisition the property it would not be done. No private property has been confiscated for war housing.

The whole Belmont Gardens difficulty, which was climaxed with Mrs. Sterling's decision to close, started more than a year ago when tenants met attempts to raise the rent by appeals to the Rent Commission.

300 a Day Line Up To Pay D. C. Tax

While the average citizen is still putting off the inevitable until March 15, the better-ordered ones—who undoubtedly do their Christmas shopping early, too—are already thronging the District Building to pay their local income tax due April 15.

About 300 persons per day are now coming in to the assessor's office, presumably with the idea of getting all the unpleasantness over at once, Allen F. Brooke, income tax administrator, reported. He predicted that the flow would continue until next Monday, when it will fall off until this time next month, when the flood of procrastinators would begin.

TRANSPORTING WAR WORKERS IS AN ESSENTIAL JOB

YOU CAN HELP

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

. . . "the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co. can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

From an opinion by the office of the General Counsel of the War Manpower Commission.

Income taxes should be paid out of savings of current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15 and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.

Announcing UNITED'S
NEW LOAN OFFICES
AUTO and Signature LOANS

The United Finance Company, affiliated with a nationally known finance institution is pleased to announce the opening of two new loan offices, conveniently located to serve you best. These offices are licensed and supervised for your protection by the Administrator of Loan Laws of Maryland. You are cordially invited to become acquainted with our friendly, fast, confidential service which has won thousands of friends over the years.

PAY DAY LOANS
$5 TO $50
A plan to help you when you need cash in a hurry. You can get $5 to $50 in just a few minutes. We try to make a loan to every worthy person. More than 90% of our signature loans are made without co-signers. It's easy to qualify. Your promise to pay is good enough for us. Other Signature Loans up to $300.

AUTO LOANS
$10 TO $300—QUICKLY
Cash on most any make or model car, in a few minutes. No red tape. No embarrassing investigations. Bring in the certificate of title of your car and get the whole amount in cash quickly. No deductions, penalties or wage assignments. Quick, confidential service.

INCOME TAX LOANS*
If you've been unable to save enough to pay your taxes due March 15th, come in and see how easy it is to get the money you need. You can get $10 to $275, or more, and pay back in a year on easy terms to fit your income.

GET OUT OF DEBT PLAN
In keeping with the Government's fight to control the cost of living, it is necessary that you pay your debts. Just make a list of your outstanding bills and bring to our office. Usually you can get all you need to pay them all off at one time. Then you only pay one payment at one place each month instead of scattered payments at different places. It's simple, quick, convenient. Come in today and see for yourself.

Need a maid?
Need a home?

LET THESE EXPERIENCES HELP YOU

Finding a maid or an unfurnished house in Washington are two things that many people consider practically impossible. Yet Mr. D. Y. and Mr. W. B. found a way to solve each of these problems. Read about their experiences:

Mr. D. Y. needed a maid. A six-line ad in The Post was the answer to his problem. When he cancelled the ad on the second day, Mr. D. Y. reported that he had five very good applicants and that he had finally hired one and placed another with a friend.

Mr. W. B. wanted an unfurnished house. Not only that, but Mr. B. wanted a 2 or 3 bedroom house. Still, although unfurnished houses are even harder to find than furnished ones, it took him less than a week to find just the house he wanted through a Post Want Ad.

You, too, can solve your problems quickly. Just call NA. 4200—that's the Washington Post number—and ask for an ad-taker. Call TODAY.

SHIPBUILDER SUE — BY BUD HILL

YOU'D SURE MAKE A NICE FIGURE-HEAD FOR THAT SHIP YET YOU WERE SUCH A RUN-DOWN LITTLE THING WHEN YOU FIRST SHOWED UP
SURE—MY DIET WAS LOW IN THE VITAMIN B COMPLEX GOT A DICTIONARY HANDY?
IT JUST MEANS I WASN'T GETTING ENOUGH OF THOSE AMAZING VITAMINS FOUND SO PLENTIFULLY IN YEAST. LACK OF THEM IN THE DIET KEEPS MILLIONS FEELING "NOT SO GOOD." I'VE BEEN DRINKING TWO CAKES OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST A DAY
YEP—DRINKING FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST IN COOL MILK, WATER OR TOMATO JUICE. IT'S CALLED A VITAMIN COCKTAIL. BUT—YOU HAVE TO KEEP AT IT A WEEK OR LONGER. MANY SEE RESULTS IN SEVEN DAYS
MAYBE I OUGHT TO TRY IT
YOU OUGHT TO! JUST GET A WEEK'S SUPPLY OF FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST—14 CAKES. KEEPS PERFECTLY IN THE REFRIGERATOR. DON'T JUST DROP A CAKE IN THE LIQUID. MASH IT FIRST IN A DRY GLASS WITH A FORK, ADD A LITTLE LIQUID AND STIR TILL BLENDED. THEN FILL UP AND DRINK.
IT'S GRAND!

"Two Vitamin Cocktails contain the following proportions of the minimum daily requirements: from yeast, 100% of Vitamin A, B, and D, 14% to 20% of B2 (also 2 to 3 pgs. of alcohol with tomato juice, 100% of Vitamin C.

If you bake at home, use Fleischmann's Yeast with the yellow label. It is the only yeast containing Vitamin B Complex and added amounts of Vitamins A and D.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(The brass ring, good one for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, is awarded today to the Civil Air Patrol.)

This brass ring goes not to one man but to 68,000 men and women. They are members of the Civil Air Patrol who have been fighting the war in little single-motor planes flying within the boundaries of the United States, and who carry the torch for the future of civil aviation in this country.

How long they will be allowed to carry that torch is the important question. At present they are orphans of the storm—carrying military responsibilities without military standing. They fight submarines, but they had to fight for weapons first. The Army and WPB are slowly throttling them by refusing new equipment or repair parts. Thus in order to keep their gradually deteriorating machines going, the Civil Air Patrol is almost certain to be swallowed by the Army.

The Army has been wanting to take over because civilian fliers in wartime are considered a nuisance by the military—with justification in some cases.

Youths and Fathers

But the owners of 25,000 private planes thought they had something to offer. The younger ones went into military service. Others, being married men with families, organized the Civil Air Patrol, which for more than a year has been flying the coastal waters and maintaining a courier service throughout the United States.

These are the "Flying Minute Men." At first their submarine patrol was merely a spotting job. If they spotted a submarine, they were supposed to radio a shore base and then hover around waiting for a bomber to come to the scene of action. But they had so many heartrending experiences, that they clamored for bombs of their own. They would dart low over the water, discover a submarine location, radio to a shore base, hold the contact, hover and pursue—and then sometimes lose the prey because the Army never came along with the bombs.

For months they called in vain for bombing equipment. War Department insisted that no civilians are allowed to carry weapons, and thus the Civil Air Partol should not be armed. The Army would not even release life rafts, and as a result several CAP pilots have lost their lives on submarine patrol.

Finally the restriction was waived, and today these little single-engine planes carry small bomb racks, bombs and bomb sights.

But they have not been allowed to reveal the success of their submarine patrol. War Department calls it "military information," and insists that CAP shall say no more than that they have "attacked" submarines—without indicating the result.

Subs Sunk

But we can reveal that submarines spotted by CAP observers have actually been sunk. The authority for this statement is Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the Army Air Corps, who also emphasizes that these "Flying Minute Men" have provided their own planes, tools, radios and other equipment.

A year ago German submarines were sinking merchant ships within sight of the Atlantic coast. This brazen activity ceased after establishment of the Civil Air Patrol. The submarines were driven into deep waters, for the small planes, flying low and flying slowly, were able to do a better job of spotting than big patrol bombers which whizzed past the scene too rapidly for close observation.

Submarine patrol is the most dramatic, but not the most common service of CAP. Many a pilot never sees the ocean. CAP operates a regular scheduled courier service in the Northwest, which covers 21,000 miles a day. They carry parts for repair of larger planes. They carry registered mail, bearing the sidearms for protection of the mail. They fly food to crashed bombers, dropping it by paper parachutes from 100 feet or less.

Recently Thompson Products Co. of Cleveland, large manufacturer of airplane engine valves, broke a pump and required replacement from a small pump manufacturer in Defiance, Ohio, which has no commercial airport. CAP courier service flew to Defiance, landed in a cow pasture, and 3 hours and 20 minutes later, the pump had been delivered to Cleveland and installed. The Thompson plant resumed operation.

At Point Pleasant, W. Va., an ordnance plant was marooned by flood waters. Factory workers cleared a parking lot, marked it off with strips of sheeting and indicated wind direction by an arrow made with rice strewn on the ground. On this emergency landing field, CAP fliers brought in mail, food and a chef to feed the hungry workers.

At Columbus, Ohio, CAP, in response to an urgent call during a flood flew typhoid serum to the town of Gallipolis, and dropped the serum by parachute onto a soggy golf course.

A bad freeze threeatened the fruit and vegetable crops of a large Florida area the other day. CAP planes flew all night over an 8000-acre tract of tomatoes, beans and berries, keeping the air stirred up and preventing a freeze.

In the Far West, CAP pilots who know the mountain passes, fly, as one Air Corps general expressed it, "not over the mountains but through them."

A four-motored Army bomber made a forced landing at Baldy Peak, a 12,000-foot dome near Taos, N. Mex. One of the crew was killed. The CAP squadron from Alamosa, Colo., kept the nine survivors supplied with food, clothing, cigarettes, and emergency equipment until rescue was effected.

This is the spirit on which hangs the future of civilian aviation in the United States. If the Army does take over the CAP, it will have the responsibility of preserving that spirit and that service.
